ALLIES RETREAT NEAR DOMBAAS

Start Building 200-Man CCC Camp Near City

MATERIAL FOR HOUSING UNITS PUT ON TRACT

23 Buildings to Be Erected on 12-Acre Plot 3 Miles East of Mansfield.

COMES AS SURPRISE

Shipment of Equipment Comes as Surprise to Officials, Given No Advance Word.

Huge government transport trucks early today began moving in equipment and material for construction of a 200-man Civilian Conservation Corps camp on state route 39, three miles east of Mansfield.

Unexpected and without any notification to local authorities, large quantities of lumber and roofing materials were arranged in large piles preliminary to the actual construction work scheduled to begin next week. The unit is to start operation after June 1.

District CCC officials at Columbus said today that the decision to establish the camp in Richland county had been arrived at only recently by federal soil conservation and CCC officials in Washington.

A total of 23 buildings are to be erected on a 12-acre roadside plot leased to the government by R. W. Hunt, whose farm is located on the east side of route 39, about one mile south of U. S. route 30, or is commonly known as the lower Lucas road.

It was learned that the term of the lease was for five years for an annual sum of $10 per acre.

Supervise Construction.

Preliminary work of platting the site was in charge of Russell S. Johnston, captain of the quartermaster reserve corps of the U. S. army, who was supervising the work today and who will superintend camp construction.

Housing facilities will include administrative offices, several

Youth Finds Vein Of Silver (Coin) At Loudonville

LOUDONVILLE — Clydus Shoudt, 16, had turned miner today and was searching for the "vein of silver" which netted him seven old silver dollars Monday.

Young Shoudt, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Shoudt, who reside six miles south of here, struck the "lode" Monday when he was digging post holes for a new fence around the family garden.

He found the seven silver dollars, piled on top of each other, in an old post hole. They were still in good condition and bore the dates of 1801, (two of this date:) 1802, 1804, 1878 and 1879. He took them to the bank to learn if they had any special value because of the dates.

About a year ago his father found a silver coin in the vicinity of the old fence, and young Shoudt continued his search today in the belief that a former owner of the farm may have used the garden fence for a bank. The Shoudts have lived on the farm for 37 years It formerly was owned by a man named Wolf.

Lending enthusiasm to the boy's dream of sudden wealth is the fact that last Saturday night he dreamed of finding a box filled with old gold coins. Now he's certain he's going to find it.

Hell and Maria Go With Pipe

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Former Vice President Charles G. Dawes buried his famous expression, "Hell and Maria," with his underslung briar pipe last October.

The colorful, often lusty language he once used was missing last night when he made one of his rare public appearances of recent years to address a dinner meeting of 1,000 chamber of commerce officials.

In his address he proposed a comprehensive plan "the next president might adopt to balance the budget."

STATE SEES NO NEED FOR CITY RELIEF LEVIES

Estimates Mansfield's Cost For '40 at $65,000; County, Shelby Face Deficits.

William H. Hartsough, state relief consultant, predicted today that Mansfield, with estimated 1940 relief expenditures of $65,000, would have a Dec. 31 poor-aid balance of $14,200 without recourse to either a special real estate levy or additional tax delinquency bonds.

In conference with officials of the city, Richland county, and Shelby, Hartsough placed Mansfield's 1940 relief income at $79,200, including $30,000 appropriated by the city council early this year and a $9,289 balance as of Jan. 1.

At the same time, Hartsough said issuance of $13,951 available in delinquent tax notes would permit Richland county to end 1940 with a relief deficit of $4,297, compared with a deficit of $5,403 Jan. 1. He said issuance of $2,580 in tax notes, coupled with $2,000 made available from the general fund, would give Shelby a year-end balance of $1,800.

Additional relief was promised by the state highway department, which said a project now awaiting federal approval would permit employment of 170 men for the remainder of 1940. The department now is employing 130 men on WPA work on the West Fourth street repaving project.

No Chance for Levies.

County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe said there was little chance of passing special 1.5 mill levies, suggested as the possible source of $47,888 for the county, $81,436 in Mansfield, and $11,482 in Shelby.

"We have made every effort to exhaust all possible funds without drastic curtailment of necessary functions," Wolfe asserted. "We have not proposed any additional levies."

Others in the delegation were County Commissioners Ray Hout and C. L. Mitchell; county Statistician Margaret L. Austin; county Relief Director J. V. Finney; W. C. Statler, engineer, and C. M. Crafton, safety service director and Mayor W. R. Morris and finance director Chester Monn of Shelby.

Injuries Suffered at School Take Life of Galion Student

GALION — An autopsy performed this morning on an 18-year-old Galion high school senior revealed that an accident at the school yesterday morning caused his unexpected death at 8:19 a. m. today.

The youth, Richard Danner, was injured at 10 a. m. yesterday when a file over which he was working on a lathe in the school's vocational department, jammed against him, causing a severe bruise on his abdomen.

Dr. Mart Helfrich, attending physician, following the autopsy, said death was caused by a blood clot in the heart, a rupture of the stomach and other internal injuries.

Charles Aplas, vocational shop co-ordinator at the school, said young Danner was working on a piece of material and was hurrying to get it finished when the accident happened. He said the file became caught in a chuck in the material and kicked back, the wooden handle striking him in the stomach.

According to Aplas the youth did not complain of the injury until shortly after the accident. A physician was then called. The physician said there was no abrasion of the skin only a bruise.

The youth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Danner, and was a guard and captain of the school's basketball team this year. He captained the school's golf team last year.

Surviving besides his parents are a brother Robert of Galion, a sister, Betty at home, and his grandparents.

DRIVE TOTAL HITS $50,000 SECOND DAY

New Reports Keep Figure Above Last Year's Record as Industries Lead.

HENKEL ASKS PROMPTNESS

Predicts Goal Will Be Reached By Saturday But Sees Much Work Still Ahead.

Still maintaining a lead over figures in last year's drive, six divisions in the Community Fund campaign reported pledges today which brought the total amount subscribed to $50,329.30, as workers completed their second day in the field.

Actually reported at the meeting of campaign majors this noon in the Evergreens cafeteria was $2,541.

Industries Give More.

Largest portion of this amount came from the industries division. Clyde K. Smaltz, general chairman, reporting for H. W. Arlin, industries major who is out of the city, set the figure at $1,000 making the total for this division $34,734, an amount well over the industries' quota.

Second highest report today came from the public utilities. Robert Remy turned in pledges for $736 from this division.

Four other divisions reported as follows: James Hoffman, for foods, $410; Mrs. Tom Ford, for organizations, $139; O. C. McCormick, for construction, $180, and Bert Haley, for clothing, $76.50.

Five divisions did not report at the meeting today which was in charge of C. H. Henkel, Community Fund chairman.

"While we are confident that the goal of $57,500 will be reached by Saturday," Henkel told the workers, "majors in the drive are urged to get their pledge cards in as quickly as possible so that everything can be cleared up on the date the drive is scheduled to be complete. There still remains a great deal of work before us."

TWELVE KILLED IN TORNADOES

Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas Hit by Damaging Storms; Many Persons Injured.

(By Associated Press)

Tornadic winds ripping across sections of southern Illinois, southeast Missouri and Arkansas and a cloudburst in east Texas killed at least 12 persons, injured many and caused thousands of dollars damage last night.

Six were killed and eight injured, one critically, near Benton, Ark., as a tornado cut a 75-foot swath through a sparsely settled rural section.

At least two were killed and an unestimated number were injured as tornadoes bounced over southeastern Missouri and southern Illinois. Thirteen persons from both states were taken to a Cairo, Ill., hospital. Six were hurt at Marion, Ill.

Mrs. Ruby Hawks was killed when a building collapsed during a heavy windstorm at Grand River, Ky.

GOES TO JAIL

Child Molester Fined $200 on Plea of Guilty.

A child molester who pleaded guilty in municipal court this morning to a charge of attempting to lure three small girls in to his automobile Sunday will spend the next four and a half months in the county jail.

Fined $200 and costs, Thomas B. Samples, 41, Cleveland, was committed to the county jail to "sit-out" the fine at the rate of $1.50 a day when he was unable to pay.

Samples, a painter, was arrested Sunday afternoon by Patrolmen Howard Schuck and Russell Miles after he allegedly coaxed three girl to get into his automobile with him.

He was picked up at Fifth and North Main street, shortly after the parents of the three girls reported that the children had been stopped by the man on Wayne street and Park avenue west.

BASE BOMBED

Paris Hears 11 Nazi Planes Destroyed In Raid.

PARIS—(INS)— Reports received in Paris today stated that the Nazi airdrome at Hartvick, Norway, was bombed and 11 large German bombers were destroyed in a raid last night.

The reports also said that the little band of Norwegians holding the Hegra fortress near the Swedish frontier has finally established contact with the Allied troops.

Parade Tops Schedule of Ceremonies Before Game

Old-Timers Will Make Appearance on Diamond at 7:30 Prior to Clash Between Stover Lads and Pandas.

By CHARLES MARTIN

With weather forecasts predicting light showers tonight, the Mansfield Braves at noon today weren't thinking of postponing their opening Ohio State league game with the Lima Pandas at 8:30 at the Fairground, and it looks as if it'll take a heavy shower to halt the contest.

Anxious to win their first league pennant, the Braves will send Richard Otto, a righthander, to the hill in an effort to register their first triumph.

With the mercury hovering around the 50 mark at noon and indications pointing to colder weather tonight, plans are set to stage a pre-game parade which will leave the American Legion home at 7 o'clock.

STOVER

The players, Manager Dewey Stover, and the club directors will lead the parade which is scheduled to move down Park avenue west, around the park, out North Main street to Sixth and then out Springmill street to the ball park. Floats will lend color to the cortege which will include the American Legion Drum corps and the Grotto Patrol. Ralph Hughes is general chairman of the parade.

Ceremonies will start at the

HOUSE TABLES HATCH MEASURE

Political Regulation Bill Lands In Pigeonhole.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The house judiciary committee killed today the senate-approved Hatch bill to regulate political activities of state employes paid with federal funds.

The committee ordered the bill "tabled," meaning that it will be stuffed away in a pigeonhole.

The vote was not announced and Chairman Sumners (D., Tex.) refused to discuss the matter beyond making the bare announcement of disposal of the measure.

DRY BREAKFAST

Chicago Strike Takes Milk From Morning Tables.

CHICAGO — (AP) — Several hundred thousand Chicago and suburban residents went without milk and cream for breakfast this morning.

A strike voted by the Milk Wagon Drivers union halted virtually all home deliveries in the metropolitan area.

Drivers stopped work because of a dispute over a new wage contract with the Associated Milk Dealers of Chicago. Their old contract expired at midnight.

Dealers sought a contract calling for a wage scale of $30 per week, plus commissions. The union held out for the old scale of $48, plus commissions.

Residents in the metropolitan area consumed more than 1,500,000 quarts of milk daily. An estimated 48 per cent is home delivered. Approximately 4,000 drivers were affected by the dispute.

WAR REVERSES STIR BRITISH TO CRITICISM

Chamberlain and Cabinet Face Aroused Parliament as Italy Threatens.

EXPLANATION DEMANDED

Royal Air Force Fliers Raid Three Cities in Renewed Drive on Nazis.

By WEBB MILLER
(UP Staff Correspondent)

LONDON—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and his cabinet colleagues faced an anxious and critical house of commons today as Britons discussed German successes in Norway and the possibility that diversion of British shipping from the Mediterranean foreshadowed Italy's entrance into the war on Germany's side.

The possibility that the withdrawal of Allied troops from southern and central Norway might be advisable was discussed frankly, and Liberal and Labor party spokesmen made it plain that they would hold Chamberlain and his men strictly accountable if there had been any bungling.

A war office communique said that British troops fighting the German offensive in the region of Dombaas, vital Norwegian rail junction, had withdrawn to prepared positions after stubborn resistance.

The withdrawal in the area of Dombaas (which the Germans claimed to have captured yesterday) was announced after the air ministry said that British planes had rained bombs on German-held "air" bases in Scandinavia in an apparent big-scale drive to challenge the Nazi air superiority in Norway.

The war office communique said:

"In the Namsos area (just north of Trondheim) the situation at the front is unchanged.

"The areas occupied by the

GERMANS CLAIM SWEEPING GAINS

Berlin Reports Destroyer and Cruiser, 5 Transports Sunk By Nazi Forces.

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—Heavy new blows to British naval power and steady strengthening of the Nazi hold on Norway were reported by the high command today as the German army, jubilant over its swift successes, mapped a sweeping concentric attack aimed at driving allied forces into the sea.

The high command's communique said German aerial bombs had sent a British cruiser, a destroyer and five transports to the bottom and had damaged another cruiser and five other transports.

Declaring that "the German advance in Norway continues," the high command reported that German forces had taken more than 4,900 prisoners. Of the front, it said merely that "at Trondheim fighting still went on yesterday," without indicating how near Trondheim the battle was raging.

The prisoners, it said, were 40 Britons and 200 officers and 3,500 men of the Norwegian second division captured northwest of Lillehammer and 1,200 other enemy troops who laid down their arms in the mountains near Lomm.

The British, meanwhile, were said to have met reverses in air forays.

The high command declared eight British warplanes were shot

AKRON COUPLE CHOOSE CITY FOR MARRIAGE

Miss Gertrude Dorenbrack, Cousin of Mrs. Russell Gimbel, Becomes Bride of Delbert Wolffberger Today.

MISS GERTRUDE DORENBRACK of Akron chose the First Congregational church here for her wedding to Delbert Wolffberger, also of Akron. Rev. Peter Young performed the quiet ceremony at 12 o'clock today before relatives and close friends of the couple. The bride had her cousin, Mrs. Russell Gimbel, for her matron-of-honor, and Mr. Wolffberger's brother, Robert, was the best man.

Mrs. Dean Eckert presided at the organ before the ceremony, playing "Spring Song," "Intermezzo" and "Andante." During the service, which was read before the altar banked with flowers and lighted by two seven-branched candelabra, Mrs. Eckert played, "I Love Thee" by Grieg.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Dorenbrack of Los Angeles, Calif., wore a costume suit of light weight wool in a pastel shade of blue trimmed with gray fox. Blue accessories and a flowered turbin completed the costume, with which she wore a shoulder corsage of orchids.

Mrs. Gimbel was attired in a navy blue and white ensemble with matching accessories and shoulder corsage of yellow orchids for the occasion.

Immediately after the wedding, friends and relatives of the couple gathered at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Charles J. Karcher on the West Fourth street road, for luncheon. The buffet table was decorated with spring flowers, lighted tapers and a tiered wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolffberger will make their home in Akron following a motor trip through the east. The bride, who was graduated from West high school in Akron, has been a receptionist at the Wheelan photographic studios in New York City. Mr. Wolffberger, son of Mrs. Florence Wolffberger of Akron, is a graduate of South high school in Akron and is employed by the Firestone Rubber company there now.

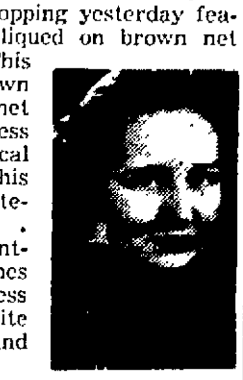
Shopping Around...

With MARIANNE



Marianne

NOW that one warm day approaches quickly on the heels of another, all eyes turn toward crisp, cool and comfortable dresses.... One of the smartest new frocks I saw while shopping yesterday featured brown and white printed silk crepe appliqued on brown net to give a horizontal striped effect. . . . This dress buttoned down the front, and had a brown patent leather belt at the waist—and a brown net frill trimming the V-neckline. . . . Another dress which had cool net for style, combined vertical stripes of black net in the pleated skirt of this tailored frock for a contrast with its basic material—black and white dotted silk jersey. . . . Black mesh will comprise the right dress for countless occasions, and one of the best-looking ones I've seen this season, combines a tailored dress and bolero jacket—both trimmed with perky white organdy (a pleated and ruffled collar, cuff and bow set).

* * *

The latest Hollywood innovations are those clever torso-jacket dresses. . . . These ensembles top sheer silk dresses with rayon crash jackets—designed in the new, longer lengths with hipline pockets, short sleeves, tailored collars and fitted lines.... A black sheer frock trimmed with wooden buttons, tied with aqua yarn, and aqua piping, sported an aqua jacket which had the same kind of buttons on the front closing. . . . The other outfit of this type that I saw downtown yesterday, had a navy blue sheer dress, brightened at the neck with a necklace of wooden beads in gay fiesta colors—and the red torso-jacket buttoned down the front with wooden buttons, colored to match the necklace.

* * *

Sometimes the days and evenings are too warm for wearing a wool coat, and yet too cool to be out with no wrap at all—so that's why you'll be pleased to hear about the attractive unlined silk coats a local store is showing now. . . . In navy blue and black, a swagger style is collarless, trimmed with a trapunto design on either side of the front closing, while a fitted style features a belted waistline and tailored lapels.

* * *

WHEN you get a pretty new summertime coat or frock to liven up your wardrobe, you'll want a fragrant perfume to pep up your personality too. . . . "Blue Grass" is such a pleasant, light scent, that it just makes you think of a field of blooming flowers after a freshening rain. . . . This odor (which is already established as a favorite perfume with many) now can be purchased in Flower Mist—a grand cologne for warm days, and complementary dusting powder in a shaker container. . . . "French Lilac" is another lovely floral scent, which comes in cologne, bath powder and bath oil.

* * *

You'll find cool clean driving the result of equipping your car upholstery with those grand cotton crash covers. . . . They're as cool as can be, and are easy to remove for washing whenever necessary. . . . They're natural in tone, with a dark binding.

* * *

GIFT SUGGESTIONS FOR MOTHER: With Her Day less than two weeks away, you better keep your eyes open for a gift she'll appreciate and enjoy. . . . One of the downtown stores is showing sewing cabinets for this very purpose—covered with washable wallpaper in a colorful floral design, these little cabinets have as many as five drawers (with special ones for pins, needles, shears, thread and the like). . . . Those popular aprons, which are so easy to wash off because of their composition (silk marquisette protected with a film of limestone, coke and salt) are cool and colorful for wear during the warm weather. . . . A clever little salt and pepper set has crystal condiment holders, which look like little lanterns, hanging on the stock of a shiny silver anchor. . . . If your mother takes pride in her dressing table (and what woman doesn't?), she'll be delighted with one of those crystal automizers—blue, green or transparent, with large white dots and a gold spray.

Note: The styles described above are available in Mansfield shops. You can learn where they may be obtained if you will telephone Marianne at The News-Journal between 1 and 2:30 p. m.—Canal 4251.

The speaker of the evening was John Correll, who emphasized the necessity of keeping bitterness out of primaries so that harmony would exist in a party after the election. Atty. Marshall Moore introduced candidates seeking election on the Democratic ticket. Thirty-two new members of the club also were introduced.

The musical portion of the program was given over to the group singing of "America," and selections by a quartet composed of Dwight Hodgson, Max Williams, Morris Stretch and A. W. Van Acker. Prosecuting Atty. Glenn Marriott and Mr. Correll were the judges of a quiz-bee, conducted between the men and women present.

On May 21, the club will observe its 25th anniversary at a tea from 4 until 6 p. m. at the Mansfield-Leland hotel. New members will be received at that time, when Mrs. Boyd Wierman will serve as general chairman.

Child Should Have Work To Do

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Child character as well as roses can be cultivated in the garden. The growing child who finds enjoyment among the plants and flowers he has helped to care for learns to be careful of other people's plants and flowers, and other property of the neighborhood. What a fine character service the public schools have rendered through their school gardens.

Not so many children, however, are gardeners at home. Their parents rarely give them the opportunity or exercise the skill and patience necessary to win the child's so-operation and persistence in the garden.

The child from five to 10 is more ready to work in the garden than the older child, as a rule. But if this younger child is to help in the garden or care for his own plot there, he will need sympathetic, patient guidance. Most parents regard a child in the garden as a kind of nuisance, messing things up. They prefer to do all the gardening themselves and have the youngster out of the way. They are thinking more about the garden than the child.

Small Plot at First.

Wise parents begin early with the tot, giving him a small plot and helping him as much as necessary, no more, in its planting and care. At first this plot is very small, but gets larger as the child grows older and learns to take responsibility for it.

Whether four or nine, the child who at first is very enthusiastic, watching the plants coming through the ground from the seed or developing from the stocks transplanted there, watering them, stirring the soil about them and keeping down the weeds, may lose interest and neglect his garden. Skillful parents may be able to keep this interest of the child alive, especially by inducing him to work in the garden at the time the parent does. But alas! many a parent will choose to cultivate the child's garden for him rather than take the trouble to cultivate responsibility in the cihld for its care.

As with pets, the child's early enthusiasm may wholly disapper unless a way is found to keep it alive. When this happens and he wholly abandons the enterprise, he may be far worse off morally than if he had never begun with it.

Not many children old enough to operate a lawn mower keep the home lawn clipped on their own free will and accord. Like duties inside the house, this one usually needs to be assigned and supervised somewhat. When, however, Dad and the boy or girl do the lawn together, taking turns at the mower and the shears, the child may readily co-operate, if he is able to budget his time for it according to a definite program.

Whether the child can be counted on to care for the lawn without argument will depend on whether he had learned earlier to take responsibility indoors for doing regular jobs. Well educated at home in earlier years, the child old enough to do the lawn has learned to do certain regular inescapable jobs about the home because he is a member of the family. Other things he has volunteered to do because he found satisfaction in co-operating in an atmosphere of family companionship.

No matter how much money his parents have, a growing boy or girl, for the best character education, needs to have certain definite, regular, inescapable jobs about the home—if at no other time, when it is the maid or gardener's day off. But let no parent suppose that such jobs can always or even generally be made wholly attractive.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Dear Chief," Lillian said sweetly. "Am I right in thinking that you no longer need Madge and me tonight?"

"I always need both of you," my father said, smiling. "But I can get along without you better this evening than on most occasions. And you ought to get a good sleep tonight in order to face tomorrow's ordeal, for I know that rehearsal will be just that for you and Margaret as well as Mary."

"Not so much for me," Lillian said, "although, of course, I'm tremendously concerned in the outcome of the experiment. But Madge's nerves and Mary's must be doing tap dances all over the place. Come along, Madge, and let me tuck you into bed after we've made the rounds and seen that everybody is staying put."

She grasped my hand and pulled me to my feet. But I put my other hand in my father's quickly outstretched one, and lifted my face for his kiss.

'Good-night, my darling," he said, "and get to sleep quickly."

"Just so you won't forget me," Dicky said mischievously, clipping me round the waist as my father released me, and kissing me heartily. "Don't wait too long before hitting the hay, Lil. You're seconding this 'champeen' in the fight-to-the-finish bout between 'Kid' Veritzen and 'Kid' Graham, aren't you?"

"Surest thing you know," Lillian retorted, "and you needn't worry that massive brain of yours any longer. I'll ride herd on her. She'll be in good condition to put the kibosh on old Phil tomorrow. I pledge you my word on that."

"Snap out of it!" she advised me.

"You'll never be on your toes in the morning if you don't relax tonight. Come on to my room and I'll put you to bed. Then I'll make the rounds and see that everybody is staying put while Dicky and your father deal with those men of Leslie's. I want to wait up for Harry, anyway, so it will be no hours taken off my young life."

"I'll take counsel with Katrina and see what I can safely drop into a cup of hot milk for you," she said as she turned toward the door. "If you're asleep when I come back, you won't have to take the posset. But no faking, remember! I shall know. I'll hold your nose while I put the dose down you."

I laughed at her nonsense as she went out of the door, but I found that I could not obey her command to relax, or gratify her hope that I would get to sleep. I was wide awake when she finally came back, and my nerves were more taut than ever.

"Well! how about it?' she greeted me as she came in the door, found the night lamp alight, and saw that my eyes were open. "Do I hold your nose, as I threatened, or will you take this peaceably?"

"This" was a large cup from which the steam of hot milk arose. I wondered idly if concealed within it was the sedative which Lillian had threatened to get from Katherine for me.

"I'll take it gladly," I said, but a laughing and familiar voice sounded behind Lillian.

"Hold everything!" Katherine said as she came into the room, and taking the cup from Lillian's hand, set it on the table.

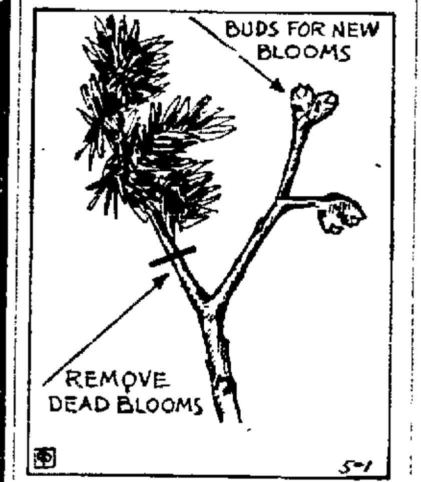
Garden Graph

By DEAN HALLIDAY



"Beheading" Lilacs.

"Beheading" is the proper method of maintaining the beauty of lilacs, for the flower heads of the lilac should be removed just as soon as they begin to fade. If this is not done, the ripening seeds sap the energy of the plant, instead of letting it be used in the production of new growth and fresh blooms.

As shown in today's Garden-Graph, the flowers for the new season come from the group of buds found just below the wilted cluster of seeds shown in the illustration. Since the new flower buds make their appearance so very close to the old flower heads, care must be taken when removing the faded flower heads so that the new flower shoots won't be injured.

Regular pruning of lilacs is not necessary, but to get the best results from them, remove the weaker shoots at the same time you remove dead flower heads.

ENLARGE CHURCH

BUCYRUS—The rapid increase in membership in the Church of the Nazarene necessitates additional housing, Rev. L. L. Zimmerman announced today, adding the present church will be enlarged and improved to meet the need.

The present church structure, located at Iron and East Warren streets, was built five years ago. The roof will be raised and a second story added to provide balcony space.

Staying Young Important

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

If you ask a little girl her age, she is likely to say "eleven going on twelve." But after she reaches the middle teens, she drops the "going on." And after that, with both men and women, a system of subtraction sets in, and we take refuge in such genial platitudes as "a woman is no older than she looks," and "a man is no older than he feels."

Growing old can be a highly unpleasant performance. No wonder staving-off age is the third greatest industry in the country. Glance into any barber shop and you'll see that the gentlemen are not immune to the steaming and creaming, or even to permanents.

But there are several examples of perennial youth in this country and the general recipe seems to be don't worry, keep busy and if you're a lady and want to preserve your throat line, hold your head up.

Four decades of teaching English at Yale hasn't dulled the enthusiasm, energy or sprightly gait of Professor Emeritus William Lyon Phelps. He still runs upstairs, sometimes two at a time, and is busy every moment, to which he attributes his youth. He lectures and writes, producing last year an auto-biography of 986 pages, brimming over with the good times he has had and the interesting people he has known.

He says he has no sympathy with old people who are worried about young people. He thinks it may be because the old people are jealous. They realize they can't play the game much longer and hate to open the door to the younger generation. But this hasn't been Dr. Phelps' attitude. He staves off age by keeping busy.

Actress Effie Shannon, whom I interviewed when I was a cub reporter, hardly looks older today than she did at the turn of the century. Miss Shannon must be at least seventy, but she looks at least thirty years younger. The other day she confessed: "I chose the age of 40 some time ago and I intend to stick to it."

Miss Shannon's favorite recipe for youth is "you must love your work and find it interesting and inspiring." When asked about her perfect throat line, which makes her the envy of all chinny ladies, she said: "The whole secret is posture. Never slouch. Once a stage director tells an actress about her posture, she stays told." Miss Shannon thinks that relaxation is equally important. She dispenses with a chauffeur and drives her own car because [illegible]ing, you can't think about anything else.

Ruth Chatterton is still another example of perennial youth. Her recipe is "if you want to stay young, don't worry about growing old. Worry adds years to a woman's appearance. The strain affects the health. The more you worry, the worse you look.

AUTOMATIC SQUEEZES

SOME OF the gaudiest-looking plays in the game are dealt into the cards in such a way that you can't help making them. This is especially true of certain squeeze plays, which are automatic in their development when you merely run off the set-up tricks which have been dealt to you. While this goes on, one opponent tries to hold stopping cards in a couple of suits, but finally he is at a stage where he no longer can discard without wrecking his chances in one suit or another.

West led his club 5 to the K, whereupon the declarer ran off five tricks in diamonds and three more clubs. As he played the last, he left himself three hearts and his spade K, and four hearts in the dummy.

During this time, East's problem was getting increasingly threatening. He followed suit to the first club trick and three diamonds, discarded clubs on the next two diamonds and, though it hurt, his spade 10 and Q on the next two clubs. He still was holding on to his spade A and his four hearts than toss away his spade A, he kept it and threw away one of his hearts. The declarer thereupon cashed his heart A and went to the dummy to finish up the hand with four heart tricks, making an unbid grand slam.

If East had thrown away his spade A in order to keep four hearts, the declarer would merely have cashed his spade K and then would have taken three heart tricks, making the grand slam anyway. It was a squeeze play which South could not help making, no matter how he tried.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, May 2.

RATHER conflicting planetary conditions are shown in this day's astral map. While there may be excellent opportunity for advancement, progress and surprising developments, subtle complications are likely to arise to confuse and perplex. While the tendency may be to rush into action and force the issue, rashly and impulsively, the better procedure would be to confer with superiors, employers or those in authority who will be found friendly and helpful.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to encounter some conflicting and perplexing situations during the year. These are likely to become involved in subtle or intriguing entanglements, gaining advantage by shunning impulsive, angry and restless and unreasoning handling. In difficulties it would be well to seek the wise counsel of superiors, employers or those in influential positions.

A child born on this day may be capable, progressive and ambitious, attracting the endorsement of its superiors by its merits, ingenuity and good qualities both business and social. It should be genial, successful and happy.

TRADERS SELL OFF LEADING STOCKS TODAY

Even Aircrafts Slip Downhill as They Survey German List of Victories.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Traders, surveying the German list of announced successes in Norway, sold off leading stocks in disputed fashion today. Even the aircrafts slipped downhill.

Behind minus signs included U. S Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, U. S. Rubber, International Harvester, Douglas, United Aircraft, Kennecott, American Smelting, Westinghouse, International Paper and Texas Corp

* * *

Bonds likewise declined. Commodities were mixed. All foreign markets tended lower.

* * *

Wall Street analysts were confirmed in previously expressed opinions when United States Steel Corp. announced earnings equal to $1 24 a common share

Interest increased in regard to new large-scale financing which may be contemplated, now that the Union Pacific railroad's $81,000,000 bond offering is out of the way.

CHAPTER XXVI

"My life like the prints which feet
Have left on Tampa's desert strand;
Soon, as the rising tide shall beat
All trace will vanish from the sand;
Yet, as if grieving to efface
All vestige of human race
On that lone shore loud moans the sea—
But none, alas, shall mourn for me!"

Mrs. Eric Montague Reardon groaned as the drear verse from the pen of Richard Henry Wilde over and over again beset her tortured brain. A wild light appeared in her eyes as she raised a trembling, emaciated hand and beat a clenched fist upon her forehead, striving with all the strength of a strengthless body to drive the hideous verse, the horrible thought expressed, from her milling mind. But to no avail. Over and over again the verse repeated itself, and the words, like malicious demons come hot from hell, tortured her, mocked her, frightened her, until it seemed that she was the vortex of all the fear in all the Godforsaken world.

"But none, alas, shall mourn for me!"

That was a lie. A despicable, malicious lie!

Of course people would mourn for her, hundreds of people. Poverty-stricken men and women and children would not soon forget their benefactor and friend Richard Henry Wilde was a friend, a friend who had written hack verses to torment people who lay upon their last earthly bed. Ah, if she had but one more day to live! Could she but live another twenty-four hours she would buy every copy of "My Life is Like the Summer Rose" and have each burned. If she could but live . . .

A sigh escaped her pallid lips as the last anger she was ever to know faded away as gently as the setting sun leaves the Western sky. She knew that death was approaching closer—closer.

"Eric," she whispered faintly "are you there Eric?"

A cool hand was laid gently upon her forehead and his voice came to her from out of the blackness.

"Yes, Mother, I am here."

* * *

A pleased sigh escaped her lips and she gently drew his hand to her cheek. "Eric, I'm not afraid now. I—I can almost see your father. I can almost feel his hand on mine, leading me away to the paradise he found years ago. Eric, I'm going to be happy now. For the first time in twenty years I'm going to be really happy."

"I'm glad, Mother. But hush, you must be quiet. Dr. Peale said you must not waste your strength."

"And I want you to be happy, Eric," she whispered, tears suddenly beginning to stream down her withered cheeks. "I want you to return to New York after I'm gone. I want you to marry Elaine. She's such a good girl, Eric, the type of girl I would have chosen for you had I been permitted to choose. You see, that is why I hated Elaine so. I hated her because she came into your life without my help. I was so foolish, I wanted to be the one to give you everything."

"She'll understand, Mother," Eric consoled her. "She knows, she always knew that you were simply concerned over my welfare."

"A person hates first and then finds a reason for hating, Eric. I hated Elaine and used the fact that she went on that drinking party as an excuse to break up your marriage. But even if you had married her without my consent I would never have disinherited you. Do you believe that?"

"Of course I do, Mother."

"And you'll go back to New York and marry her?"

"I will."

* * *

Mrs. Reardon smiled and hugged his hand close to her cheek. Eric's softly spoken words had thrilled her; they had been uttered in that same rich, ringing baritone voice his father had used when they were made man and wife. If only she could look upon her son now; if only she could see him as he now was—a man! Yes, in that brief moment Eric had become a man.

Ah, she wasn't entitled to so much happiness. She had been stupid, selfish, cruel. She had tortured Eric and Elaine and sought time after time to deprive them of their one chance for happiness. But everything was going to turn out all right now. Eric was finally going to marry Elaine, and Elaine, when she received her share of the Reardon fortune, would know that she had approved of the match. Yes, she had been cruel but she had made amends. She could die happy.

"Eric, will you go now? Will you go and my best wishes for happiness, my son!"

Eric leaned down and kissed his mother tenderly upon the cheek. "I'll go, mother," he said in a choked voice. Sensing that her time was near he kissed her again and again, tears streaming down his cheeks. "I'll go now, Mother," he said. She did not answer; he knew that she would never answer him again.

Mrs. Eric Montague Reardon, aristocrat, was dead.

* * *

Eric was never to forget the grief that overwhelmed him as he knelt beside the bed in the darkened room and stared down at the face of the woman who had been his mother. Nor would he ever forget the radiant smile upon her lips, the smile of a woman who had been given, in death, the greatest happinese she had ever known. In that moment Eric forgave her all the torment and cruelty she had inflicted upon him.

Unable to convert his thoughts into words, unable to deliver one coherent prayer on her behalf, Eric was grateful to the minister who presided over his mother's funeral service several days later in the white-shingled chapel his father had erected for the community twenty-five years ago. Grateful was he too to the townspeople who, forgetting their trials and tribulations, had gathered in this small house of God to pay their last respects to a woman who, though, cynical, unfriendly, snobbish, had seen her duty towards the poor and performed it generously.

* * *

The burial itself was anticlimax. The day was dark and dreary and a dismal rain fell, soaking to the skin those real friends who had gathered about Mrs. Reardon's final resting place. Eric was conscious of complete exhaustion when he turned from the grave and got into the limousine. In the days since his mother's death there had been many things to do. Now—now all was done.

For several days following the burial service Eric wandered like a lost soul through the great house, finding in the darkened rooms a haunting memory of the woman who had frequented them for so many years. For a time he dwelt in a half world of memory and grief, eating little, seeing no one, talking seldom, and it was not until Helen Wortorski delivered Betty's telegram that he made a sincere effort to throw off his lethargy.

"I'm sorry to bother you, Mr. Reardon," Helen said respectfully as she entered the room. "But this telegram has come for you from New York and I thought it might be about something urgent."

From New York! From Elaine? Hopefully Eric ripped open the envelope, but his face fell as he read Betty's tersely worded message. He stared down dully at the words. Elaine to be married? To whom? When? Why? But she couldn't marry any one else!

"Oh, I hope it isn't serious!" Helen exclaimed, laying a hand on his arm, all solicitude. Her baby blue eyes were wide and warm. "You've had so much grief lately, Mr. Reardon."

Eric brushed her hand impatiently from his arm. His eyes became steely as he scrutinized Helen's face and his lips drew into a flat line. "No, nothing is wrong, Miss Wortowski," he said curtly. "But while you are here we might just as well get one thing straightened out. You know, of course, that since my mother's death there is no longer any need of your services as a secretary."

Helen's cheeks crimsoned and her eyes became hard. "I get it, Eric. Elaine has poisoned your mind against me."

"You will gain nothing by adopting that attitude or that tone of voice," Eric told her sharply. "Elaine has never said anything about you that wasn't true. She harbors no ill feeling toward you because she realizes it was my mother who sent you to New York. As far as your job is concerned, I cannot use you as a secretary. But—would you care to consider a position as housekeeper with me?"

His generous action surprised Helen. "Of—of course I would," she stammered eagerly. "And I'm sorry about New York, Mr. Reardon."

"You'll be sorrier," Eric said grimly," if you try any more tricks with either of us again. Now, call up the airport and arrange for a ticket back to New York. I want to leave at once."

* * *

He smiled as Helen hastened to obey his command. He was glad suddenly that he had not followed his first impulse and discharged her. Elaine too would be glad that he hadn't. The sweet, lovable, sympathetic thing, she would have hated to have him turn Helen out on the street when jobs were so difficult to find. And if Helen were deserving of punishment, the knowledge that she was serving under a woman who knew her as she really was would be bad enough. Yes, he had disposed of Helen nicely.

But what, about Elaine? He wished he had let her know his reason for returning to California. But things had happened too swiftly. The night he was supposed to meet her at the restaurant he had been compelled to work overtime in the store, and since that day he had not had a chance to see her. What a fool he had been! He should have told her about his mother. But no, he had done the right thing. Had he told her about his mother's illness she would have forgiven him out of sheer sympathy. And he hadn't wanted that; he had wanted, still wanted, her to forgive him because she wanted to.

Helen appeared in the doorway. "The plane leaves at three o'clock, Mr. Reardon. Shall I pack your things?"

He nodded without speaking, too engrossed with his thoughts to be courteous.

Elaine marrying some one else! It seemed fantastic and yet Betty wasn't the type who would say or write anything which wasn't true. Yes, Elaine was going to be married. Probably the man was Stuart. Looking back, he could see that he had been doing the wrong thing all along. He should have married Elaine that first day in New York. He should have married her whether he lost his fortune or not. Elaine hadn't been interested in a life of luxury for its sake alone. She had been interested in him and in whatever sort of life he cared to give her.

Less Sweeping Revisions of Wage-Hour Law Planned

BARDEN BILL LOADED THEN TURNED DOWN

Administration Forces Win Fight Against Freeing of Farm Processors.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Jubilant over defeating the controversial Barden amendments, administration forces in the house pushed ahead today with plans to enact less sweeping revisions in the wage-hour law.

The proposals of Rep. Barden (D-NC) were turned down 156 to 66 late yesterday after the house had made so many changes that even their author withdrew his support.

The original amendments, opposed by President Roosevelt, would have freed a long list of processors of farm products from both the minimum wage of maximum hour standards.

Against this administration victory in the house, however, there developed the probability that the senate would pass a Republican bill to end the treasury's foreign silver buying program.

Opened Debate.

Senator Townsend (R-Del), the author, opened debate yesterday with an assertion that the seven-year old program had been a costly mistake. He was supported by some Democrats as well as by the Republican minority.

Secretary Morgenthau said recently that the treasury purchases had stabilized silver prices and aided many countries "with whom we have friendly relations."

House labor committee amendments, reputed to have White House suport, would grant hours' concessions to some farm processors—such as canning companies—but would permit only a few exceptions from the 30-cents-an-hour minimum wage.

Chairman Norton (D-NJ) of the labor committee, leading the administration fight, predicted that these amendments would be adopted. Representative Ramspeck (D-Ga.) supporting her, said that the wage minimum "seems pretty safe" from broad exemptions.

Some Revision.

Out of the whole tangle came general predictions that some revisions would be approved and sent to gather dust in the pigeonhole of the senate labor committee.

"Loading" of the Barden amendments took place while the Norton forces sat by smiling, knowing that too broad a bill would be ditched.

Then, when Rep. Brown (R-Ohio) put forward an amendment to prevent any wage exemptions, they joined in the loud chorus of "ayes" which added it to the Barden measure.

That changed the whole picture. Barden stood up before his colleagues and said:

"I am not for the Barden bill."

Republicans Pick Unpledged Slate In Massachusetts

BOSTON —(U.P.)— Massachusetts Republicans elected 34 unpledged national convention delegates in yesterday's presidential primary, giving the state organization a 5-to-1 sweep over an old-age pension group favoring Thomas E. Dewey, virtually complete returns showed today.

The Democrats elected at least 69 of the party's "official" slate of 72 candidates pledged nominally to Postmaster-General James A Farley. The opposition, however, also favored Farley, protesting only against the delegate candidates picked by the party leaders.

Massachusetts has 34 votes in each national convention. The Democrats elected 12 delegates-at-large, each with a third of a vote, and 60 district delegates, each with a half vote. The Republicans chose four at-large and 30 district delegates, with a full vote each.

The Republican vote for delegates-at-large was high lighted by the "bulleting" against U. S. Rep. Joseph W. Martin, house minority floor leader and a favorite son candidate. Martin received the lowest vote of the four "organization" candidates. The ticket was led by Gov. Leverett Saltonstall with U. S. Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., and former State Treasurer John W. Haigis in that order.

On the Democratic side, the third term issue was befogged by the fact that the Farley-pledged slate originally was selected by State Committee Chairman William H. Burke, jr., with the stipulation that it would switch to President Roosevelt if his name was presented.

Up and Down THE STREET

The new issue of Cosmopolitan magazine carries an interesting article, "The Land Shall Make You Free," by Louis Bromfield. It is illustrated with pictures taken at Malabar Farm, a year ago before the old Herring house was touched, and as it is today. The theme of the Bromfield article is that in these years of changing conditions and uncertain financial stability, the only real security for the future is in the tillable land; that no matter what happens, a man who has a roof over his head and the land on which to raise food, is free. One of the pictures, taken by Cosmopolitan cameramen, shows the author standing at the mail box with a hoe over his shoulder.

* * *

That "Step Across the Mississippi River," up in Itasca park, Minnesota, pictured in Sunday's News-Journal as the subject of a Daily Scrap Book cartoon, has been taken by other Mansfielders as well as by Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Hersch. For instance, there's David L. Jones, 66 Rowland avenue, to whom that vicinity is a favorite vacation spot, and a snapshot taken in August 1938 shows "Davey" and Mrs. Jones, also H. E. Rouzer, of Sandusky, posed on those very same rocks, with trees in the background, just as pictured in Scott's cartoon—can you imagine that!

* * *

A bit of realism was added to one of the posters made at Senior high school recently by Anne Jeannette Klinger, to announce the Girls' Athletic association annual Play Day, May 11. Miss Klinger's poster depicts a girl playing tennis, and instead of drawing hair on the girl's head she cut a lock of her own hair and glued it on the poster.

* * *

When Carl McVey, of Mansfield met Cy Young, former major league pitcher, last night they really had a session going over their individual careers. McVey was a former major league centerfielder and it was the first time he had seen Young for 12 years. They spent several hours together. McVey was the manager of the Mansfield team in the old O-P league when Young was hurling for Canton. Young, who will attend the Mansfield Braves' opener at the fairgrounds tonight, later went to the majors and won 511 games before he retired in 1913.

FLAG LOWERED

Byrd Expedition Waits Until Aug. 22 for Daylight.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — There was quite a ceremony when they hauled down the flag over the U. S. antarctic expedition's west base in Little America at sunset.

A belated radio to the navy told how all members of the party stood at attention and two uniformed marine sergeants, Theodore A. Petras and Walter R. Giles, slowly folded the frozen emblem of their country.

The reason for the special ceremony? They can't raise the flag again until Aug. 22, for there won't be another sunrise until that date. The night which began last Sunday doesn't end until then.

Members of the party weren't exactly pleased but they tried to grin by calling the day "blackout day" and eating a turkey dinner.

PEACE PROGRAM URGED FOR GOP

Hamilton Fish Calls Party Leaders for Discussion of Campaign Plank.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — A drive to put the Republican party on record in its 1940 platform as unalterably opposed to the United States taking part in Europe's second World war was launched ttoday by Rep. Hamilton Fish, N. Y., ranking G. O. P. on the house foreign affairs committee.

Asserting his purpose is to identify the Republican party as "the party of peace in America," Fish urged the G. O. P. to adopt "a strong anti-war platform" at its Philadelphia convention. He declared his opposition to any "platitudes or generalities" and demanded a "ringing challenge against interventionism."

The New Yorker offered a personal anti-war plank for his party's consideration. He also called a conference of all Republican members of the house foreign affairs committee to meet Thursday for a round-table discussion of a "keep us out of war" plank. Those invited include Rep. Vorys (Ohio.)

Explaining his purpose, Fish said:

"I think the incorporation of a plank in the Republican platform to keep the United States out of foreign war is the most important plank that could be adopted. I want to make it as specific as possible, so that the party will be pledged to uphold the American policy of neutrality and non-intervention.

"The framing of such a plank, reflecting the view of the peace elements within the Republican party and of millions of Democrats who are striving for more abundant life instead of more abundant death on the battlefields of Europe, will be essential to party success.

"There must be no platitudes, generalities or lip-service to peace. It must be a ringing challenge against internationalism, and a fourth-right answer to the disciple of despair who prattles that war is inevitable."

PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT JUMPS 18 PER CENT DURING MARCH

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Federal Security Administrator McNutt reported today that private employers had hired 18 per cent more persons during March than they did in the same month last year.

"Authoritative reports . . .," he said "indicate that there is an increasing demand for workers in industry and commerce. Slowly but surely the level of the country's great reservoir of idle workers is falling x x x."

Despite the optimism voiced in McNutt's report, it was disclosed that congressional leaders were weighing a suggestion that additional funds be allocated to the WPA, should need arise before the fiscal year closes June 30. Approximately $1,500,000,000 already has been appropriated for relief up to that date.

Senator Barkley (D., Ky.) said more WPA money could be obtained by dipping into the $975,000,000 relief appropriation which President Roosevelt has requested for the first eight months of the 1941 fiscal year beginning July 1. He said, however, that no decision had been reached.

WPA rolls on April 1 listed about 2,100,000 persons.

The figures on the March employment were made public by McNutt in a statement coincident with President Roosevelt's proclamation designating this as "national employment week."

In connection with the proclamation, McNutt instructed state directors of 1,600 federal employment bureaus and officers of the CCC, the National Youth administration and the office of education to co-operate with civic organizations and private employers to find jobs for the unemployed.

"I suggest," he said, "that during this national employment week' there be set up 3,000 permanent local committees of representative citizens x x x to go over the whole federal and local governmental employment program and to keep constantly at work stimulating job placements."

White Challenges Bricker on Relief Policy

STUMP DEBATE OVER ECONOMY CLAIMS URGED

Other Cadidates Keep Busy in Campaign Speeches Throughout State.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Former Governor George White, of Marietta pumped life into the primary campaign today just two weeks before the election by suggesting that he and Governor Bricker fight out the Republican economy claims "on the stump."

White, campaigning for another Democratic gubernatorial nomination, told a crowd of some 700 Democrats here that he could place the economy record of his two administrations against the claims of Governor Bricker.

He also struck at Bricker on his relief policies and failure to make Ohio old age pension laws conform to federal statutes whereby pensioners would be entitled to a maximum $40 monthly pension instead of the present $30 limit.

"I pride myself on economy," White said, "but not on economy at the sacrifice of any group of citizens who were as hungry as they were in Cleveland.

Debate Suggested.

"I am willing to meet Governor Bricker on the stump on his theory of economy."

He expressed the hope that he would be elected "to give old age pensioners higher income."

"Today we are losing money because the governor is afraid to call an extra session of the legislature. I was not afraid. I called extra sessions and cooperated with President Roosevelt 100 per cent," he added.

An extra session of the assembly would be necessary to synchronize Ohio old age pension laws with more liberal federal pension legislation.

Other Candidates.

Other candidates for the Democratic nomination—seven in all—were on the stump about the state and a big Democratic rally in Lima Saturday night will wind up the week's campaigning. Former Secretary of State William J. Kennedy was in Canton and Akron last night and former Gov. Martin L. Davey after a speech at Bridgeport yesterday was to move into Zanesville and Muskingum county today. Both White and Kennedy are scheduled for speeches in Sidney tonight.

The principal speaker at the Lima Democratic rally will be Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, a Democratic presidential prospect. Young Republican clubs will whip up enthusiasm for the G. O. P. cause here Saturday with Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts, delivering the principal address.

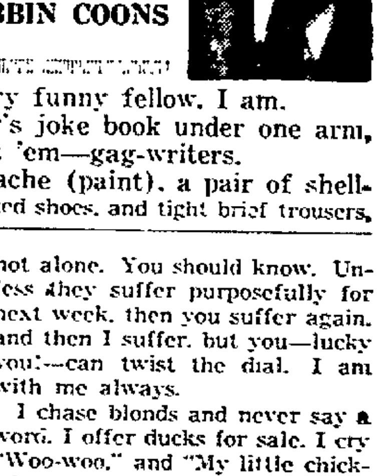
Hollywood Speaks---



—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—I am a very funny fellow, I am.

I have a copy of Joe Miller's joke book under one arm, and I am trailed by 10—count 'em—gag-writers.

I put on a big black moustache (paint), a pair of shell-rimmed specs, a funny derby, oversized shoes, and tight brief trousers, and I panic you.

I wear whiskers sometimes, and am bald and part my hair in the middle. When I want to be a rough, happy-go-lucky frontier character I tote a jug of sperrits and swig therefrom at frequent intervals. I chaw tobaccy, and if all else fails I spit. I spit to emphasize a point, or just because it seems the thing to do—when all else fails. If I can spit (I know it's a horrid word, but it's a blessed bit of business) over a sizeable spread of floor directly into a cuspidor, thus scoring a bull's-eye, I am a sensation. I generally am, anyway.

* * *

My "slow burn" routine is a wow. It always has been. I look upon the stupid, inept doings of my fellows, and I burn. I get hotter and hotter under the collar. I clench my hands, and I pucker my mouth and forehead, and I feel like a volcano about to spit fire, and there's that word again. I gasp and snort and seethe, and my hands turn into fists, or weave clutchingly toward imaginary throats. I am assisted in this routine if the air simultaneously is filled with winged custard pies.

I go on the air occasionally, and I wow 'em, meaning you. Some weeks I am not so good and then my gag-writers suffer. Most weeks I am a wow, and then I think "Ain't I the one?" What a question! Of course I am. When my gag-writers suffer, they are not alone. You should know. Unless they suffer purposefully for next week, then you suffer again, and then I suffer, but you—lucky you!—can twist the dial. I am with me always.

I chase blonds and never say a word. I offer ducks for sale. I cry "Woo-woo," and "My little chickadee," and I mow 'em down with six delicious flavors and my uncle Fudd. I talk in a dozen dialects, and I am especially good when I splutter. This makes me a German dialect comedian. I splutter effectively also as a Russian, and Frenchman, or a Dutchman, and I wave my arms so you will know I am a foreigner.

* * *

I am at my funniest when I am in trouble. I haven't been clinging to the parapets of tall buildings lately, but you should see me—you have?—skidding on a banana or explaining to my sweetheart who was that wife she seen me with last night.

When all else fails, including spitting and falling flat, I do a "taken." Somebody says something insulting, and I don't get it right away, but I do a moment later. You may be getting sick of "takems" but please don't—what would I do without 'em?

You know me now, don't you? I'm the composite Hollywood comedian. I look so glum because I don't know where your next laugh is coming from. I'm afraid it's not from me.

CHAPTER XXVI

"My life like the prints which feet
Have left on Tampa's desert strand;
Soon, as the rising tide shall beat
All trace will vanish from the sand;
Yet, as if grieving to efface
All vestige of human race
On that lone shore loud moans the sea—
But none, alas, shall mourn for me!"

Mrs. Eric Montague Reardon groaned as the drear verse from the pen of Richard Henry Wilde over and over again beset her tortured brain. A wild light appeared in her eyes as she raised a trembling, emaciated hand and beat a clenched fist upon her forehead, striving with all the strength of a strengthless body to drive the hideous verse, the horrible thought expressed, from her milling mind. But to no avail. Over and over again the verse repeated itself, and the words, like malicious demons come hot from hell, tortured her, mocked her, frightened her, until it seemed that she was the vortex of all the tear in all the Godforsaken world.

"But none, alas, shall mourn for me!"

That was a lie. A despicable, malicious lie!

Of course people would mourn for her, hundreds of people. Poverty-stricken men and women and children would not soon forget their benefactor and friend. Richard Henry Wilde was a friend, a friend who had written hack verses to torment people who lay upon their last earthly bed. Ah, if she had but one more day to live! Could she but live another twenty-four hours she would buy every copy of "My Life is Like the Summer Rose" and have each burned. If she could but live . . .

A sigh escaped her pallid lips as the last anger she was ever to know faded away as gently as the setting sun leaves the Western sky. She knew that death was approaching closer—closer.

"Eric," she whispered faintly "are you there Eric?"

A cool hand was laid gently upon her forehead and his voice came to her from out of the blackness.

"Yes, Mother, I am here."

* * *

A pleased sigh escaped her lips and she gently drew his hand to her cheek. "Eric, I'm not afraid now. I—I can almost see your father. I can almost feel his hand on mine, leading me away to the paradise he found years ago. Eric, I'm going to be happy now. For the first time in twenty years I'm going to be really happy."

"I'm glad, Mother. But hush, you must be quiet Dr Peale said you must not waste your strength."

"And I want you to be happy, Eric," she whispered, tears suddenly beginning to stream down her withered cheeks. "I want you to return to New York after I'm gone. I want you to marry Elaine. She's such a good girl, Eric, the type of girl I would have chosen for you had I been permitted to choose. You see, that is why I hated Elaine so. I hated her because she came into your life without my help. I was so foolish, I wanted to be the one to give you everything."

"She'll understand, Mother," Eric consoled her. "She knows, she always knew that you were simply concerned over my welfare."

"A person hates first and then finds a reason for hating, Eric. I hated Elaine and used the fact that she went on that drinking party as an excuse to break up your marriage But even if you had married her without my consent I would never have disinherited you. Do you believe that?"

"Of course I do, Mother."

"And you'll go back to New York and marry her?"

"I will."

* * *

Mrs. Reardon smiled and hugged his hand close to her cheek. Eric's softly spoken words had thrilled her; they had been uttered in that same rich, ringing baritone voice his father had used when they were made man and wife. If only she could look upon her son now; if only she could see him as he now was—a man! Yes, in that brief moment Eric had become a man.

Ah, she wasn't entitled to so much happiness. She had been stupid, selfish, cruel. She had tortured Eric and Elaine and sought time after time to deprive them of their one chance for happiness. But everything was going to turn out all right now. Eric was finally going to marry Elaine, and Elaine, when she received her share of the Reardon fortune, would know that she had approved of the match. Yes, she had been cruel but she had made amends. She could die happy.

"Eric, will you go now? Will you go and my best wishes for happiness, my son!"

Eric leaned down and kissed his mother tenderly upon the cheek. "I'll go, mother," he said in a choked voice. Sensing that her time was near he kissed her again and again, tears, streaming down his cheeks. "I'll go now, Mother," he said. She did not answer; he knew that she would never answer him again.

Mrs. Eric Montague Reardon, aristocrat, was dead.

* *

Eric was never to forget the grief that overwhelmed him as he knelt beside the bed in the darkened room and stared down at the face of the woman who had been his mother. Nor would he ever forget the radiant smile upon her lips, the smile of a woman who had been given, in death, the greatest happinese she had ever known. In that moment Eric forgave her all the torment and cruelty she had inflicted upon him.

Unable to convert his thoughts into words, unable to deliver one coherent prayer on her behalf, Eric was grateful to the minister who presided over his mother's funeral service several days later in the white-shingled chapel his father had erected for the community twenty-five years ago. Grateful was he too to the townspeople who, forgetting their trials and tribulations, had gathered in this small house of God to pay their last respects to a woman who, though, cynical, unfriendly, snobbish, had seen her duty towards the poor and performed it generously.

* * *

The burial itself was anticlimax. The day was dark and dreary and a dismal rain fell, soaking to the skin those real friends who had gathered about Mrs. Reardon's final resting place. Eric was conscious of complete exhaustion when he turned from the grave and got into the limousine. In the days since his mother's death there had been many things to do. Now—now all was done.

For several days following the burial service Eric wandered like a lost soul through the great house, finding in the darkened rooms a haunting memory of the woman who had frequented them for so many years. For a time he dwelt in a half world of memory and grief, eating little, seeing no one, talking seldom, and it was not until Helen Wortorski delivered Betty's telegram that he made a sincere effort to throw off his lethargy

"I'm sorry to bother you, Mr. Reardon," Helen said respectfully as she entered the room. "But this telegram has come for you from New York and I thought it might be about something urgent."

From New York! From Elaine? Hopefully Eric ripped open the envelope, but his face fell as he read Betty's tersely worded message. He stared down dully at the words. Elaine to be married? To whom? When? Why? But she couldn't marry any one else!

"Oh, I hope it isn't serious!" Helen exclaimed, laying a hand on his arm, all solicitude. Her baby blue eyes were wide and warm. "You've had so much grief lately, Mr. Reardon."

Eric brushed her hand impatiently from his arm. His eyes became steely as he scrutinized Helen's face and his lips drew into a flat line. "No, nothing is wrong, Miss Wortowski," he said curtly. "But while you are here we might just as well get one thing straightened out. You know, of course, that since my mother's death there is no longer any need of your services as a secretary."

Helen's cheeks crimsoned and her eyes became hard. "I get it, Eric. Elaine has poisoned your mind against me."

"You will gain nothing by adopting that attitude or that tone of voice," Eric told her sharply. "Elaine has never said anything about you that wasn't true. She harbors no ill feeling toward you because she realizes it was my mother who sent you to New York. As far as your job is concerned, I cannot use you as a secretary. But—would you care to consider a position as housekeeper with me?"

His generous action surprised Helen. "Of—of course I would," she stammered eagerly. "And I'm sorry about New York, Mr. Reardon."

"You'll be sorrier," Eric said grimly," if you try any more tricks with either of us again. Now, call up the airport and arrange for a ticket back to New York. I want to leave at once."

* * *

He smiled as Helen hastened to obey his command. He was glad suddenly that he had not followed his first impulse and discharged her. Elaine too would be glad that he hadn't. The sweet, lovable, sympathetic thing, she would have hated to have him turn Helen out on the street when jobs were so difficult to find. And if Helen were deserving of punishment, the knowledge that she was serving under a woman who knew her as she really was would be bad enough. Yes, he had disposed of Helen nicely.

But what about Elaine? He wished he had let her know his reason for returning to California. But things had happened too swiftly. The night he was supposed to meet her at the restaurant he had been compelled to work overtime in the store, and since that day he had not had a chance to see her. What a fool he had been! He should have told her about his mother. But no, he had done the right thing. Had he told her about his mother's illness she would have forgiven him out of sheer sympathy. And he hadn't wanted that; he had wanted, still wanted, her to forgive him because she wanted to.

Helen appeared in the doorway. "The plane leaves at three o'clock, Mr. Reardon. Shall I pack your things?"

He nodded without speaking, too engrossed with his thoughts to be courteous.

Elaine marrying some one else! It seemed fantastic and yet Betty wasn't the type who would say or write anything which wasn't true. Yes, Elaine was going to be married. Probably the man was Stuart. Looking back, he could see that he had been doing the wrong thing all along. He should have married Elaine that first day in New York. He should have married her whether he lost his fortune or not. Elaine hadn't been interested in a life of luxury for its sake alone. She had been interested in him and in whatever sort of life he cared to give her.

Less Sweeping Revisions of Wage-Hour Law Planned

BARDEN BILL LOADED THEN TURNED DOWN

Administration Forces Win Fight Against Freeing of Farm Processors.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Jubilant over defeating the controversial Barden amendments, administration forces in the house pushed ahead today with plans to enact less sweeping revisions in the wage-hour law.

The proposals of Rep. Barden (D-NC) were turned down 156 to 66 late yesterday after the house had made so many changes that even their author withdrew his support.

The original amendments, opposed by President Roosevelt, would have freed a long list of processors of farm products from both the minimum wage of maximum hour standards.

Against this administration victory in the house, however, there developed the probability that the senate would pass a Republican bill to end the treasury's foreign silver buying program.

Opened Debate.

Senator Townsend (R-Del), the author, opened debate yesterday with an assertion that the seven-year old program had been a costly mistake. He was supported by some Democrats as well as by the Republican minority.

Secretary Morgenthau said recently that the treasury purchases had stabilized silver prices and aided many countries "with whom we have friendly relations."

House labor committee amendments, reputed to have White House suport, would grant hours' concessions to some farm processors—such as canning companies—but would permit only a few exceptions from the 30-cents-an-hour minimum wage.

Chairman Norton (D-NJ) of the labor committee, leading the administration fight, predicted that these amendments would be adopted. Representative Ramspeck (D-Ga.) supporting her, said that the wage minimum "seems pretty safe" from broad exemptions.

Some Revision.

Out of the whole tangle came general predictions that some revisions would be approved and sent to gather dust in the pigeonhole of the senate labor committee.

"Loading" of the Barden amendments took place while the Norton forces sat by smiling, knowing that too broad a bill would be ditched.

Then, when Rep. Brown (R-Ohio) put forward an amendment to prevent any wage exemptions, they joined in the loud chorus of "ayes" which added it to the Barden measure.

That changed the whole picture. Barden stood up before his colleagues and said:

"I am not for the Barden bill."

Republicans Pick Unpledged Slate In Massachusetts

BOSTON—(UP)—Massachusetts Republicans elected 34 unpledged national convention delegates in yesterday's presidential primary, giving the state organization a 5-to-1 sweep over an old-age pension group favoring Thomas E. Dewey, virtually complete returns showed today.

The Democrats elected at least 69 of the party's "official" slate of 72 candidates pledged nominally to Postmaster-General James A Farley. The opposition, however, also favored Farley, protesting only against the delegate candidates picked by the party leaders.

Massachusetts has 34 votes in each national convention. The Democrats elected 12 delegates-at-large, each with a third of a vote, and 60 district delegates, each with a half vote. The Republicans chose four at-large and 30 district delegates, with a full vote each.

The Republican vote for delegates-at-large was high lighted by the "bulleting" against U. S. Rep. Joseph W. Martin, house minority floor leader and a favorite son candidate. Martin received the lowest vote of the four "organization" candidates. The ticket was led by Gov. Leverett Saltonstall with U. S. Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., and former State Treasurer John W. Haigis in that order.

On the Democratic side, the third term issue was befogged by the fact that the Farley-pledged slate originally was selected by State Committee Chairman William H. Burke, jr., with the stipulation that it would switch to President Roosevelt if his name was presented.

AMHERST, Mass., (UP) Massachusetts has 140,000 dairy cows, the largest number since 1926, reports Ellsworth W. Bell, Massachusetts State College farm economist.

Up and Down THE STREET

The new issue of Cosmopolitan magazine carries an interesting article, "The Land Shall Make You Free," by Louis Bromfield. It is illustrated with pictures taken at Malabar Farm, a year ago before the old Herring house was touched, and as it is today. The theme of the Bromfield article is that in these years of changing conditions and uncertain financial stability, the only real security for the future is in the tillable land; that no matter what happens, a man who has a roof over his head and the land on which to raise food, is free. One of the pictures, taken by Cosmopolitan cameramen, shows the author standing at the mail box with a hoe over his shoulder.

That "Step Across the Mississippi River," up in Itasca park, Minnesota, pictured in Sunday's News-Journal as the subject of a Daily Scrap Book cartoon, has been taken by other Mansfielders as well as by Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Hersch. For instance, there's David L. Jones, 66 Rowland avenue, to whom that vicinity is a favorite vacation spot, and a snapshot taken in August 1938 shows "Davey" and Mrs. Jones, also H. E. Rouzer, of Sandusky, posed on those very same rocks, with trees in the background, just as pictured in Scott's cartoon—can you imagine that!

A bit of realism was added to one of the posters made at Senior high school recently by Anne Jeannette Klinger, to announce the Girls' Athletic association annual Play Day, May 11. Miss Klinger's poster depicts a girl playing tennis, and instead of drawing hair on the girl's head she cut a lock of her own hair and glued it on the poster.

When Carl McVey, of Mansfield met Cy Young, former major league pitcher, last night they really had a session going over their individual careers. McVey was a former major league centerfielder and it was the first time he had seen Young for 12 years. They spent several hours together. McVey was the manager of the Mansfield team in the old O-P league when Young was hurling for Canton. Young, who will attend the Mansfield Braves' opener at the fairgrounds tonight, later went to the majors and won 511 games before he retired in 1913.

FLAG LOWERED

Byrd Expedition Waits Until Aug. 22 for Daylight.

WASHINGTON—(UP)—There was quite a ceremony when they hauled down the flag over the U. S. antarctic expedition's west base in Little America at sunset.

A belated radio to the navy told how all members of the party stood at attention and two uniformed marine sergeants, Theodore A. Petras and Walter R. Giles, slowly folded the frozen emblem of their country.

The reason for the special ceremony? They can't raise the flag again until Aug. 22, for there won't be another sunrise until that date. The night which began last Sunday doesn't end until then.

Members of the party weren't exactly pleased but they tried to grin by calling the day "blackout day" and eating a turkey dinner.

SHIP AGROUND

British Steamer Stuck On Pacific Island.

NEW YORK—(INS)—The British steamer Matakana early today sent an SOS saying she had run aground on Mayaguana island, 150 miles north of Haiti.

According to Mackay radio in New York, where the distress call was intercepted, two American steamers, the Borinquen and Santa Maria, are near the location and are in contact with the distressed vessel.

PEACE PROGRAM URGED FOR GOP

Hamilton Fish Calls Party Leaders for Discussion of Campaign Plank.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — A drive to put the Republican party on record in its 1940 platform as unalterably opposed to the United States taking part in Europe's second World war was launched ttoday by Rep. Hamilton Fish, N. Y., ranking G. O. P. on the house foreign affairs committee.

Asserting his purpose is to identify the Republican party as "the party of peace in America," Fish urged the G. O. P. to adopt "a strong anti-war platform" at its Philadelphia convention. He declared his opposition to any "platitudes or generalities" and demanded a "ringing challenge against interventionism."

The New Yorker offered a personal anti-war plank for his party's consideration. He also called a conference of all Republican members of the house foreign affairs committee to meet Thursday for a round-table discussion of a "keep us out of war" plank. Those invited include Rep. Vorys (Ohio.)

Explaining his purpose, Fish said:

"I think the incorporation of a plank in the Republican platform to keep the United States out of foreign war is the most important plank that could be adopted. I want to make it as specific as possible, so that the party will be pledged to uphold the American policy of neutrality and non-intervention.

"The framing of such a plank, reflecting the view of the peace elements within the Republican party and of millions of Democrats who are striving for more abundant life instead of more abundant death on the battlefields of Europe, will be essential to party success.

"There must be no platitudes, generalities or lip-service to peace. It must be a ringing challenge against internationalism, and a fourth-right answer to the disciple of despair who prattles that war is inevitable."

SENTENCED

Mansfielder Given Pen Term By Court for Non-Support.

Carl Glenn, Mansfield, was taken to Columbus today by Sheriff E. P. Long, to enter the Ohio penitentiary on a one to three-year sentence for non-support.

Glenn was given the sentence by Judge C. H. Huston after testimony that the defendant had received $1,400 disabled veterans compensation at one time and had given no part of it to support his children. Three of his sons are in the boys' reform school at Lancaster.

PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT JUMPS 18 PER CENT DURING MARCH

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Federal Security Administrator McNutt reported today that private employers had hired 18 per cent more persons during March than they did in the same month last year.

"Authoritative reports . . .," he said "indicate that there is an increasing demand for workers in industry and commerce. Slowly but surely the level of the country's great reservoir of idle workers is falling x x x."

Despite the optimism voiced in McNutt's report, it was disclosed that congressional leaders were weighing a suggestion that additional funds be allocated to the WPA, should need arise before the fiscal year closes June 30. Approximately $1,500,000,000 already has been appropriated for relief up to that date.

Senator Barkley (D., Ky.) said more WPA money could be obtained by dipping into the $975,000,000 relief appropriation which President Roosevelt has requested for the first eight months of the 1941 fiscal year beginning July 1. He said, however, that no decision had been reached.

WPA rolls on April 1 listed about 2,100,000 persons.

The figures on the March employment were made public by McNutt in a statement coincident with President Roosevelt's proclamation designating this as "national employment week."

In connection with the proclamation, McNutt instructed state directors of 1,600 federal employment bureaus and officers of the CCC, the National Youth administration and the office of education to co-operate with civic organizations and private employers to find jobs for the unemployed.

"I suggest," he said, "that during this national employment week' there be set up 3,000 permanent local committees of representative citizens x x x to go over the whole federal and local governmental employment program and to keep constantly at work stimulating job placements."

STUMP DEBATE OVER ECONOMY CLAIMS URGED

Other Cadidates Keep Busy in Campaign Speeches Throughout State.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Former Governor George White, of Marietta pumped life into the primary campaign today just two weeks before the election by suggesting that he and Governor Bricker fight out the Republican economy claims "on the stump."

White, campaigning for another Democratic gubernatorial nomination, told a crowd of some 700 Democrats here that he could place the economy record of his two administrations against the claims of Governor Bricker.

He also struck at Bricker on his relief policies and failure to make Ohio old age pension laws conform to federal statutes whereby pensioners would be entitled to a maximum $40 monthly pension instead of the present $30 limit.

"I pride myself on economy," White said, "but not on economy at the sacrifice of any group of citizens who were as hungry as they were in Cleveland.

Debate Suggested.

"I am willing to meet Governor Bricker on the stump on his theory of economy."

He expressed the hope that he would be elected "to give old age pensioners higher income."

"Today we are losing money because the governor is afraid to call an extra session of the legislature. I was not afraid. I called extra sessions and cooperated with President Roosevelt 100 per cent," he added.

An extra session of the assembly would be necessary to synchronize Ohio old age pension laws with more liberal federal pension legislation.

Other Candidates.

Other candidates for the Democratic nomination—seven in all—were on the stump about the state and a big Democratic rally in Lima Saturday night will wind up the week's campaigning. Former Secretary of State William J. Kennedy was in Canton and Akron last night and former Gov. Martin L. Davey after a speech at Bridgeport yesterday was to move into Zanesville and Muskingum county today. Both White and Kennedy are scheduled for speeches in Sidney tonight.

The principal speaker at the Lima Democratic rally will be Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, a Democratic presidential prospect. Young Republican clubs will whip up enthusiasm for the G. O. P. cause here Saturday with Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts, delivering the principal address.

Counsel for Mrs. Richards Asks Verdict Change.

Counsel for Mrs. Minnie Richards, Mansfield, plaintiff in a $15,000 personal injury damage suit, had filed notice of appeal today from a common pleas jury verdict against her.

Mrs. Richards sought damages for injuries she suffered last Oct. 12 when she fell through the floor of the back porch of a property owned by Harry V. O'Brien at 14 East First street. She was living in the house.

A jury returned a directed verdict for O'Brien last February and Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston overruled the plaintiff's motion for a new trial. Attys. C. F. Creedman and H. M. Rust represent Mrs. Richards.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—I am a very funny fellow, I am.

I have a copy of Joe Miller's joke book under one arm, and I am trailed by 10—count 'em—gag-writers.

I put on a big black moustache (paint), a pair of shell-rimmed specs, a funny derby, oversized shoes, and tight brief trousers, and I panic you.

I wear whiskers sometimes, and am bald and part my hair in the middle. When I want to be a rough, happy-go-lucky frontier character I tote a jug of sperrits and swig therefrom at frequent intervals. I chaw tobaccy, and if all else fails I spit. I spit to emphasize a point, or just because it seems the thing to do—when all else fails. If I can spit (I know it's a horrid word, but it's a blessed bit of business) over a sizeable spread of floor directly into a cuspidor, thus scoring a bull's-eye, I am a sensation. I generally am, anyway.

* * *

My "slow burn" routine is a wow. It always has been. I look upon the stupid, inept doings of my fellows, and I burn. I get hotter and hotter under the collar. I clench my hands, and I pucker my mouth and forehead, and I feel like a volcano about to spit fire, and there's that word again. I gasp and snort and seethe, and my hands turn into fists, or weave clutchingly toward imaginary throats. I am assisted in this routine if the air simultaneously is filled with winged custard pies.

I go on the air occasionally, and I wow 'em, meaning you. Some weeks I am not so good and then my gag-writers suffer. Most weeks I am a wow, and then I think "Ain't I the one?" What a question! Of course I am. When my gag-writers suffer, they are not alone. You should know. Unless they suffer purposefully for next week, then you suffer again, and then I suffer, but you—lucky you!—can twist the dial. I am with me always.

I chase blonds and never say a word. I offer ducks for sale. I cry "Woo-woo," and "My little chickadee," and I mow 'em down with six delicious flavors and my uncle Fudd. I talk in a dozen dialects, and I am especially good when I splutter. This makes me a German dialect comedian. I splutter effectively also as a Russian, and Frenchman, or a Dutchman, and I wave my arms so you will know I am a foreigner.

* * *

I am at my funniest when I am in trouble. I haven't been clinging to the parapets of tall buildings lately, but you should see me—you have?—skidding on a banana or explaining to my sweetheart who was that wife she seen me with last night.

When all else fails, including spitting and falling flat, I do a "taken." Somebody says something insulting, and I don't get it right away, but I do a moment later. You may be getting sick of "takems" but please don't—what would I do without 'em?

You know me now, don't you? I'm the composite Hollywood comedian. I look so glum because I don't know where your next laugh is coming from. I'm afraid it's not from me.

CARE OF FEET ARMY PROBLEM

British Chiropodists Corps To Replace Spare-Time Corn-Cutters Urged.

LONDON—(INS)—The British armed forces shortly will have as much care taken of their feet as their stomach, if a plan put up by the Joint Council of Chiropodists is carried out.

The council wants a new army corps formed, to be called the Royal Corps of Chiropodists.

Representing thousands of qualified men all over the country, the Chiropodists council says that the army's feet should be cared for by experts and not by "spare-time corn-cutters" from the ranks.

In a letter to the War Office they suggest that the new corps, if formed, should work in co-operation with the Royal Army Medical corps.

No reply has been received from the War Office, nor have they accepted the suggestion for a national register of expert chiropodists who are willing to serve with the colors.

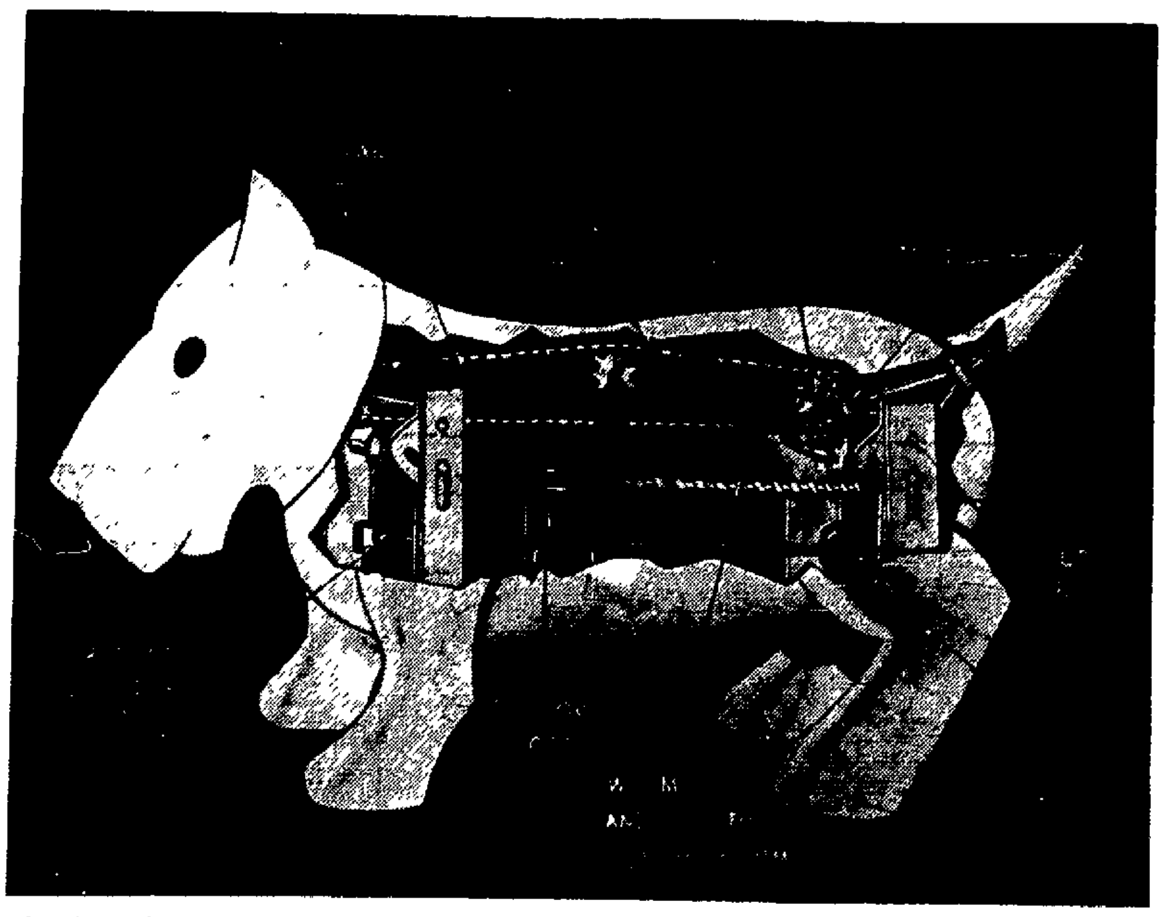
Meet 'Sparko,' the New Mechanical Pooch



Sparko, a 65-pound aluminum skinned Scotty, whose innards are filled with gears, cams, chains, sprockets, switches and motors, becomes the companion to Elektro, famed Westinghouse mechanical man, during the 1940 World's Fair in New York. The cut-away sketch shows details of the dog's electrical nerves and mechanical muscles.

ELEKTRO GETS A DOG FOR 1940 WESTINGHOUSE EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Elektro, the Westinghouse mechanical man, will have a dog at the New York World's fair this summer.

Elektro's companion will be Sparko, a 65-pound metal Scotty who will perform tricks at the command of his master just like any other dog

Sparko, like Elektro, was a creation of the engineering division of the Mansfield Westinghouse plant. He has aluminum skin to keep his weight down and his organs are motors, gears, and switches that control all his activities.

Both Sparko and his master were designed by J. M. Barnett of the Mansfield plant who will direct their performances at the World's fair. They will be features of the Westinghouse exhibit at the fair.

Sparko and wag his tail and cock his head just like a live dog, and he can bark, whine, and growl convincingly.

He stands slightly over a foot high and measures about 29 inches from his nose to the tip of his tail. Two motors rated at one-twentieth of a horsepower each are his "heart," providing animation for his legs, head and tail One motor makes him walk and the other sets him down and stands him up.

The "sitting down" motor is mounted on a sliding base and is connected through a flexible shaft to a gear that draws the rear legs up and forward, making the dog sit down. The motor slides backward in the dog's body as he sits so as to change the center of gravitation.

Connected to the rear walking mechanism is a cam tail wagging arrangement that makes Sparko's tail wag naturally as he follows Elektro. Another mechanism turns his head upward when he crouches to let him look up at Elektro.

CAVALRY GETS FRENCH JIBES

Horsemen Always Get Worst Of It From Jokesters On Western Front.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT — (INS) — (via Clipper) — In French army gags the poor cavalryman always catches it worse than anyone else.

Army satire always paints the infantryman as one who is deeply suspicious of the world and everything in it Obtuse self-satisfaction is the quality which has been hung on the artilleryman for generations.

Manner of action of the different arms:

"The infantryman: Listens, doesn't understand, asks to have it repeated, executes badly, but finally figures it out and gets there.

'The engineer: Listens, doesn't understand, asks to have it repeated, smiles. You think he's understood. Not at all—he has just thought of an objection.

"The cavalryman: Doesn't listen, parts at a gallop, goes helter-skelter, heaven only knows where, returns, salutes, reports 'all goes well.'

"The artilleryman: Doesn't listen, executes badly, doesn't understand. He fires on—ah—the order of his superior.

"The aviator: Doesn't listen, gets in his car, goes and has an aperitif."

SISSY RATTLER AVOIDS DANGER

Expert Declares Rattlesnake Will Run If He Can to Escape Humans.

SANTA FE, N. M.—(INS)—You may not believe it—but the notoriously deadly rattlesnake is afraid of you.

That's nothing, you'll say, the feeling is mutual.

But you shouldn't be afraid of the rattlesnake, according to T. O. Thatcher of Lehman Caves National Monument, Nevada, who spends his time and energy "bulldogging" rattlers

"The rattlesnake is a sissy," Thatcher said in a recent Park Service publication, "and will run when he sees a human being—if he has any place to run"

Thatcher doesn't tell what to do if there is no place for the deadly snake to run.

But Thatcher recommends that amateurs just let them run, unless of course a forked stick is handy, in which case the stick can be jammed down over the rattler's neck and he is captured.

Thatcher says he catches the snakes by running along side the sissy rattler and swinging his arm in a downward swoop and grabbing the snake around the neck and places them in his "Crotalidae" collections—the rattler's real name is "Crotalus."

Unseen Influence.

Screen writers go to extraordinary lengths to portray the "heavy" in the motion pictures they write, but the "menace" in "Rebecca," which is now showing at the Ohio theater, consists of a nightgown, lingerie, boudoir slippers and a fur coat. These are the belongings of the first Mrs. de Winter, the title character of Daphne du-Maurier's best selling novel. She is dead before the film begins but with the cold influence of death her hands shape the lives of Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine, who play the leading roles.

U. S. Envoy Questions Mussolini About War Attitude

DUCE THOUGHT REMAINING IN NEUTRAL ROLE

Sailing of Huge Liner Hints No Immediate Change In Italian Plans.

By PERCY WINNER
(INS Staff Correspondent)

ROME—In an effort to obtain an authentic picture of Italy's attitude and intentions with regard to participation in the war, United States Ambassador William Phillips called on Premier Mussolini today.

The visit, it was learned by this correspondent, was one of a number paid by the American envoy to Il Duce during the last few days.

Just what Phillips was told could not be learned beyond the fact that he and Mussolini made what well-informed circles termed an "ample diplomatic tour of the horizon."

Neutral observers, however, accepted the fact that the Italian liner Rex sailed from Naples for New York on schedule as an indication that no immediate change in Italy's policy of non-belligerency is anticipated despite the flood of rumors to this effect in London and Paris.

(Editor's Note: In addition to Rex, another giant Italian passenger liner is now on the high seas. The sleek Conte Di Savoia cleared from New York on April 27 and is not due at Naples until next Sunday.)

Phillips, it was said, formally requested some information from Mussolini regarding Italy's future course of action. The United States embassy, while confirming that the visits had occurred, refused to furnish any details.

Officials refused to comment on the British order banning "normal" English shipping from the Mediterranean. The Italian press took no notice of the action, and there was no attempt to link it with the fully-mobilized spring Italian maneuvers reportedly under way since the middle of April.

Meanwhile, it was understood that the situation regarding Yugoslavia was discussed during a private audience granted by Pope Pius to Mirosovic Sorgo, Yugoslavian minister to the Vatican.

Italian circles professed to be undisturbed by growing signs of a rapprochement between Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union as this is considered more economic than political.

Authoritative Italian quarters stressed strengthening of relations between Rumania and Italy, which was regarded as a bulwark in the Balkans in the event Russia makes formal demands upon Rumania for the return of Bessarabia.

In this connection, Italian spokesmen discounted inspired reports of the possibility of a tripartite agreement among Italy, Russia and Germany in the Balkans. Rome, it was said, remains "diffident to Moscow."

EDISON CHALLENGES JAPAN TO PLACE CARDS ON TABLE

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON— Secretary of Navy Edison today challenged Japan to a complete exchange of naval building information and, at the same time, revealed that the United States is considering a complete re-designing of battleship super-structures to strengthen them against air attack.

In the first press conference he has held since returning from the fleet maneuvers off Hawaii, Edison also said that the U. S. navy needs additional bases to protect the Panama Canal, particularly on the Pacific side. He declined to say where he thought these bases should be located.

He made the challenge for a U. S.-Japanese exchange of information when told that a Japanese spokesman had termed as "mere propaganda" a statement by Admiral Harold R. Stark that the Nipponese are secretly building a large number of super battleships.

The need for a study of battleship super-structures was uncovered during the fleet maneuvers, Edison said.

With regard to the general condition of the Navy, as revealed by the maneuvers, Edison said he found it in a high state of efficiency, adding that he was "very pleased with the way the maneuvers were handled."

"What we have is in excellent condition," Edison said. I was particularly pleased with the high caliber of young men who are enlisting in the Navy today. They are both intelligent and willing to learn."

Edison devoted the greater part of his conference to a discussion of air power as it affects the operation of surface fleets.

COURT UPHOLDS DOGS' RIGHTS

Philadelphia Man Fined for Pushing Pekinese.

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—Walter Hildreth, bearded 61-year-old former school teacher, came into court accused of pushing Mrs. Christian Febiger's dogs around.

He protested he shoved her Pekinese off the sidewalk because she was on the right when she should have been on the left, and he couldn't get by.

Magistrate Jacob Dogole, upholding the freedom of sidewalks for dogs, ruled they could walk where they please and fined Hildreth $10 for disorderly conduct.

DECLARES U.S. HEADING FOR SAVINGS TAX

Investment Bankers' Head Says Plan Would Levy on Private Accounts.

WASHINGTON—The president of the Investment Bankers of America, Emmett F. Connely, Detroit, today warned the U. S. Chamber of Commerce that the federal government is heading toward taxation of private savings to finance spend-lend policies.

Continuing the chamber's assault on the New Deal, the banker told the 1,500 delegates meeting in annual convention that the "government-must-do-it-boys" have a plan for the people's savings.

He said the government angle is this:

"The saver will be performing a disservice by withdrawing the amount of his savings from the flow of money spent for consumption. There will be no means for him to put the money back to work by investing it.

"Their solution is simply that the government must take the savings from the people and use them in a gigantic and apparently perpetual spending-lending program.

"It is the perfect build up for a tax on savings."

The chamber's resolutions committee also took cognizance of the threat to savings when it placed before the delegates a tentative draft of a resolution, which also attacked government low interest policies.

"The prolongation of the easy money policy which has been imposed upon the country for 11 years is operating to weaken the economic structure at most essential points and this policy should now undergo gradual but determined correction," the committee said.

FORM APPROVED

Revised Bigelow Petitions Okayed by Neffner.

COLUMBUS—INS—The revised Bigelow "$50 at 60" old age pension plan petitions were approved, as to form, today by Secretary of State George M. Neffner.

The Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow, Cincinnati, will now circulate the petitions in the hope of obtaining sufficient signatures to place the once defeated pension plan on the ballot in November.

Essentially, the proposal is the same as the voters defeated by a three-to-one margin last fall, but certain clarifying revisions have been made.

Single persons over 60 would be entitled to a monthly pension of $50, and married couple $80. Revenue would be raised through a 2 per cent tax on land of $20,000 an acre or more valuation and a state income tax of one-fourth the sum paid the federal government, in addition to funds at present available for pensions.

WAR REVERSES STIR BRITISH TO CRITICISM

Allied forces at Narvik (on the north Norwegian coast) have been extended and operations are continuing satisfactorily.

In the confused official and unofficial dispatches from Norway only one thing was clear: The Germans had succeeded in smashing up the Oester and Gudbrands valleys and joining their Oslo and Trondheim forces. By doing so, regardless of anything else, they had won a victory of great and possibly decisive importance in the fight for control of the mid-Norway area. They had confronted the Allies with the necessity for deciding whether they could retrieve their reverses or must withdraw from the entire Trondheim area and concentrate on holding Narvik, the great iron ore port above the Arctic.

There was no tendency here to minimize the extent of German successes—perhaps the contrary. Military experts talked of the advisability of a complete withdrawal from that part of Norway south of Trondheim, and intimated that Chamberlain and other political leaders must leave it absolutely to the fighting men on the spot and the Allied general staffs to decide what to do.

Italian Threat.

It had been announced last night:

"Pronouncements by Italians in responsible positions and the attitude of the Italian press have been recently of such character as to make it necessary for His Majesty's government to take certain precautions as regards British shipping which normally would pass through the Mediterranean. They (the government) do not intend, however, to continue these precautions any longer than necessary, and they hope that circumstances will permit their cancellation in the near future."

This meant that British ships would be diverted from the Suez-Mediterranean-Gibraltar route to the much longer route from and to the Far East, by way of the Cape of Good Hope at the tip of South Africa due to the threat that Italy might enter the war on Germany's side. Not even during the Ethiopian war, when the British home fleet was sent into the Mediterranean, had that "empire jugular vein" been closed to British ships.

Critical Speech.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal party leader, made at Edinburgh last night one of the most critical speeches the government had encountered since the war started.

"If the government has muddled this Norwegian campaign it will be for parliament to act objectively, fearlessly and resolutely at a grand inquest of the nation"—that is, an inquest on the cabinet.

He warned that unless the government acted vigorously and with determination in Norway neutrals would "rush to climb on the German band-wagon."

Air Raids.

Meanwhile Royal Air Force bombs rained on German-held Scandinavian air bases today. The R. A. F. bombers went into action against air bases at Stavanger, Fornebu outside Oslo and Aalborg on the northern tip of Denmark.

The air ministry said that seven British planes were lost in the raids. (In Berlin, the high command said eight British planes had been shot down at Stavanger and a ninth at Oslo. The Germans said the raids caused slight damage.)

The raids started last night and still were continuing this morning in an obvious effort by the British to break the crushing air supremacy of the Germans in Norway which was regarded here as the major factor in the German success to date.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain advised the house of commons that he will make a statement on the situation in Norway tomorrow.

It was said authoritatively that there is no confirmation here that the Germans have taken Stoeren and Dambaas but it was admitted they may be in German hands.

The situation on the other Norwegian fronts, however, was described as more favorable. British forces were said to be closer to Narvik and the Namsos front was said to be in good shape despite desultory German bombing between Steinkjer and Namsos.

Roeros Re-occupied, Norwegians Claim.

STOCKHOLM—(U.P.)—German troops have evacuated Roeros, southeast of Trondheim, and Norwegian forces re-occupied the city today, according to direct telephone advices from Roeros.

The German troops retreated southward from Roeros with Norwegian patrols in pursuit, Roeros reported by telephone. Previous advices from Francis McEachen, United Press staff correspondent, near there on the Norwegian - Swedish frontier, had described how Norwegian patrols filtered into Roeros under cover of dark and surprised the small German garrison in a day break attack.

Despite the recapture of Roeros the exact situation on the vital Dombaas-Stoeren railroad line was not made clear in reports reaching here.

Roeros is on a branch railroad line leading to Stoeren from the southeast and its possession is not vital to either side in the main battle being waged for possession of the Dombaas-Stoeren railroad—key to the southern approach to Trondheim and also to the allied landing bases at Andalsnes and vicinity.

(Berlin claims capture of the Dombaas-Stoeren railroad. London has not admitted the loss but admitted that the German claim may be correct.)

Offer Million for Capture of Hitler.

NEW YORK —(AP)— A Pittsburgh group offered today to pay a million dollar reward for the capture of Adolf Hitler, unhurt, but specified that the German fuehrer must be delivered into the custody of the League of Nations before the end of May.

Samuel Harden Church, president of the $28,000,000 Carnegie institute, announced the offer on behalf of an unnamed group, which he said was acting "in good faith," in a letter to the New York Times.

The unusual proposal brought back recollections of a daring post-World war scheme of a group of American soldiers to kidnap the German Kaiser from his refuge in Holland.

In his letter, Church said that Hitler should be delivered "for trial before a high court of justice for his crimes against the peace and dignity of the world.

Church said in a telephone interview with the Times that the proposal had been discussed for some time among some members of the Duquesne club of Pittsburgh after private advices reached them saying Hitler planned an attempt to break through on the western front soon.

Shortly after the Armistice of 1918 a band of Americans who had served with the A. E. F., among them Col. Luke Lea of Tennessee and Larry MacPhail, now president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, secretly entered Holland and traveled to Kaiser Wilhelm's "haven."

According to legend surrounding the adventure, which the participants were reluctant to discuss in later years, the party actually entered Wilhelm's home, but fled when surprised by Dutch guards.

Soviet 'Always Ready,' Reds Told on May Day.

MOSCOW—(U.P.)—Flames of war are burning more fiercely and might spread to any part of the Soviet union, Defense Commissar Klementi E. Voroshilov today declared in a May day address to massed troops.

Speaking at the greatest show of Soviet military might in history, Voroshilov declared that the "Soviet union does not want war, but we are always ready."

"The Russian people are grateful for the blessings of peace and are happy not to be involved in the 'imperialist war'." Voroshilov said in a four-minute speech.

"We must exercise the utmost vigilance and strengthen our Red army and our Red fleet," he added.

"Bloodshed is growing. War mongers will try to drag us into the war and then attack one or another part of our territory.

"We must double our vigilance, increase ten-fold our preparedness while further strengthening our military might."

Soviet officials described the May day celebration as one of the most elaborate ever staged.

Tens of thousands of troops filled Red square and adjacent streets. Cavalry, infantry and marines were represented.

The demonstration began at noon with the appearance of Josef Stalin at the Lenin mausoleum in the center of Red square. He was surrounded by the cabinet.

Mussolini and U. S. Ambassador Confer.

ROME—(U.P.)—United States Ambassador William Phillips called on Premier Benito Mussolini today and was said to have been informed by Il Duce that no sudden change will be made in Italy's position relative to the war.

Tension over a possible quick move which would bring Italy into the war at the side of Germany had been heightened by the revelation that the British admiralty had ordered British shipping-in-transit to avoid the Mediterranean until further notice because of that possibility.

down by German pursuit craft and anti-aircraft guns in an attack on Stavanger. It said the British lost another in the first of two raids on Fornebu, airport near Oslo—the latest early today—and had caused only slight damage.

Taking its cue from Fuehrer Hitler himself, who praised the army for having "fulfilled a tremendous assignment," the Nazi press predicted destruction of the allied forces operating in the region of Andalsnes, on the coast south of Trondheim, unless they withdraw speedily.

After establishing a connection between Trondheim and Oslo yesterday the Germans now proclaim the isolation of the allied troops which landed in the Andalsnes region and say it is only a question of time before they mop up the allied troops there and Norwegian troops farther south, around Voss on the Bergen-Oslo railway.

From Fuehrer Hitler came a spirited order of the day to his troops in Norway in which he said, after mentioning the establishment of land communication between Oslo and Trondheim, that "therewith the aim of the west powers still to be able to force Germany to her knees by a belated occupation of Norway has been definitely frustrated."

"You have fought on the Norwegian front," he said, "against all hardships on sea, land and in the air and against the resistance of the enemy. You have fulfilled a tremendous assignment which I, believing in you and your strength, had to give you.

" . . . you have made a decisive contribution in the most difficult and fateful battle of our nation for existence."

BRAVES READY FOR LID-LIFTER

Parade, Ceremonies Will Mark Opening Game at Ball Park Tonight at 7:30.

Fairground at 7:30, when Cy Young, Turk Reilly, Jack Hendricks and Roger Bresnahan make their appearance on the diamond.

Young, famous old-time hurler, who is a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, will throw the first ball to Bresnahan. The latter was a star Giant catcher shortly after the turn of the century.

Probably the greatest feat Young ever accomplished was his perfect no-hit, no-run game against the Philadelphia Athletics in 1906. Young was with Boston and beat Rube Wadell, 2 to 0.

Manager Dewey Stover will have four rookies in the lineup. They are Eldon Dice, in centerfield, William Padar, at second base, Tim Mangan behind the plate and Otto.

Otto hails from Akron, and Stover thinks the 19-year-old hurler will add strength to his pitching corps. Dice, a prospect from the rookie school conducted early in April, is a heavy hitter and will probably be one of the regulars when Stover cuts the squad to 15 later this month.

Freddie Lewis of Mansfield, will make his debut with the Lima club tonight. He is starting in right field for the invading team. Lewis played with the Braves during the last half of the 1939 season, but was unable to make the team this year.

Either Missler, Evans or Biscan will be Manager Settlemire's nomination to toe the rubber for the visitors.

A number of Lima fans are expected to be on hand for the parade and game. Tonight's tilt is the only one in the circuit. The other four teams are set to open Thursday. Mansfield goes to Lima tomorrow.

The members of the Mansfield team were introduced to some 250 fans at the fan night held at the Armory last night. Among the guest speakers were Young and Joe C. Hartline, president of the club.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS SLACKEN GERMAN RAIDS

Reporter Says Entire Town of Namsos Virtually Wrecked By Nazi Bombs.

(J. Norman Lodge, Associated Press reporter who was arrested by British troops near the far-north Norwegian port of Narvik when he penetrated to their lines around that city and later was released, has sent the following description of destruction at Namsos, Norway, by German bombers and of allied measures taken to guard against further Nazi air atacks.)

* * *

By J. NORMAN LODGE

FORMOFOSS, Norway (about -0 miles east of Namsos) German air raids on the allied troops at Namsos, which have turned parts of that Norwegian coastal town into wreckage, took a sharp decline Monday when British anti-aircraft guns opened up full blast and drove a surprised German bomber high into the upper air.

After that blast the air alarms which have kept the entire Namsos area anxious since the first days of Germany's invasion of Norway lessened by 80 per cent.

Namsos, which has steep rising cliffs on the north side, a fjord in the center and more hills on the south, now is literally alive with British and French anti-aircraft batteries. Each is manned by crack shots especially chosen to bolster the morale of the Norwegians, who have clung to their homes in this embattled town

German fliers, who, according to Norwegian airmen, formerly flew over the entire sector from Namsos to the Swedish border about 75 miles to the east as "if it were their own private airfield," realized for the first time that they would meet resistance.

I walked through Namsos and found the town, especially the lower end near the harbor, virtually wrecked. Every house in the lower part of the town is razed, with huge holes showing where German bombs hit.

One bomb crater in the center square of the lower section measured 30 feet across

Other damage apparently was caused by incendiary bombs, for ruins of the buildings were charred and the bricks were well smoked.

Despite previous reports that anti-aircraft had been set up in the Namsos area since the first days of the German invasion, a British officer let the cat out of the bag as I talked with him.

Asked if he had come close to hitting an enemy aircraft, he replied:

"Hell, man, we've only been set up five hours—haven't even warmed up the gun yet."

Further inquiry elicited the information that all British batteries and the French rapid fire guns were erected only Monday.

I was told that the only French troops in Norway up to this time are the famed Alpine Chausseurs, or "Blue Devils," equally at home on skis or on foot.

They belong to the same regiments which helped train the first American divisions in France during the World war.

Rene Langres, a World war veteran, said reports that the French foreign legion was in Norway were ridiculous.

"The prestige of France would not allow such a thing," he said. "The first French units must be of French nativity. That's the way my country operates."

British officers told the same story.

"There are a few Canadians here," said one, "but they are mostly in the air force. All land troops you see here are from the British isles, mostly north countrymen."

The crying need in this sector at present is telephone and telegraph communications

A single telephone must be divided among the military of three nations, journalists of many more and the citizenry—with the last group taking a bad beating

The only telegraph wire out is manned by a telegrapher who is opposed to working overtime.

Here's Correct Pronunciation Of Norse Names

(By Associated Press)

It's a safe bet to stress the first syllable of Norwegian place names.

Some of those most in the news are pronounced:

Oslo—Ohss'-lo.
Bergen—Bair'-gen.
Narvik—Nahr'-veek.
Trondheim—Tronn'-heeim.
Steinkjer—Stane'-share.
Andalnes—Awn'-dahlss-ness..
Namsos—Nahm--sohss.
Stavanger—Stah-vahng'-er.

Suffixes, sometimes used as separate words, usually contain the key to meanings of geographic words in Norway. For instance, the Gudbrandsdal or Gudbrandsdalen is the Gudbrands valley and Trondheim Fjord is Trondheim bay.

Other such suffixes are:

Boin—ravine.
By—town, village.
Eid or Eide—isthmus
Fjeld—mountain.
Fos—waterfall.
Gjel—gorge.
Havn—harbor.
Holm—island.
Sund—strait, ferry.

Planting of all trees and shrubs should be pushed to completion now, before too much growth starts, unless plants are to be moved with a ball of earth.

U. S. Will Try Out Blitzkrieg In Louisana

Red, Blue Armies Plan Biggest Peacetime Test Battle.

By JOHN GROVER
AP Feature Service Writer.

WASHINGTON—The American army's 1940 maneuvers are testing the new products of Europe's war laboratory.

Blitzkrieg, civilian participation, mechanization and the other advances in the so-called art of war must pass an examination in Louisiana gumbo mud, May 5 to May 25, before the Mr. Bigs in the U. S. military forces stamp "approved" on Europe's new techniques.

The 1940 maneuvers, bringing together 70,000 men from 35 states, are the greatest massing of troops in U. S. peacetime history. They fulfill a long-time army dream of large-scale training operations. Previously army units were forced to train separately at widely-scattered points.

THREE GENERALS

WASHINGTON—The three generals spotlighted by 1940 maneuvers reached the top without West Point diplomas.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, was graduated from Virginia Military Academy. Maj. Gen. Walter Campbell Short, commander of the Blue army, was appointed second lieutenant of infantry after getting his degree from University of Illinois in 1901.

Maj Gen Walter Krueger, Red army chief, came up the hard way. He was born in Germany, came to this country when a child, and enlisted as a buck private in the Spanish-American war He came up through the ranks to win his stars.

A general who talks tough—and is tough—won authorization for the war exercises by hammering on the table and telling a few homely truths to congress

The General Spoke Out.

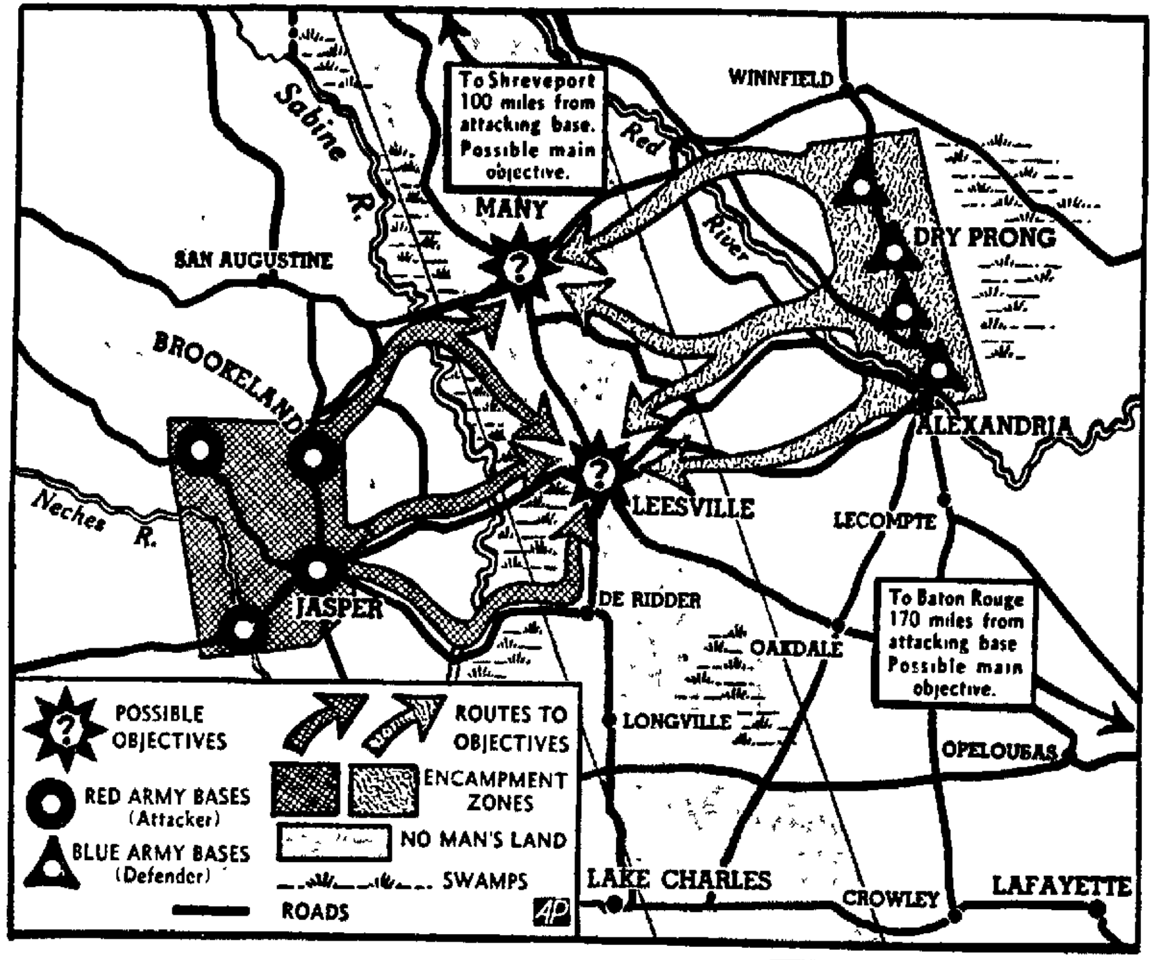
Jut-jawed Gen. George C. Marshal, chief of staff, told 'em, cold turkey, that the United States army was improperly trained.

"We have been forced (by lack of funds) to build up our technique of command and control, and even our development of leadership, largely on a theoretical basis," General Marshall declared.

General Marshall asked money to train his troops right. He got it.

That's why (1) blitzkrieg, (2) the new organization of the American army division and (3) military mechanization are under critical scrutiny in the stiffest peacetime test ever faced by American troops.

Blitzkrieg wowed the world when the Germans overran Poland. But in Finland the Russian version flopped flatter than spilled milk.



In this area, 70,000 doughboys will clash in mock war. From bases at left, the Red army will launch lightning war on secret objectives. The Blues (at right) will defend. Foe of both will be swamps and mud, but these will prove the worth of modern war implements in sweeping troop movements.

Somewhere between the startling success of the Germans and the monumental bust of the soviet gasoline cavalry lies the ideal—and limited—function of a power army. The 20-day operations in the toughest terrain available will determine the capabilities and limitations of mechanized forces.

The 20,000-square-mile war games sector was deliberately chosen to put men and machines through the acid test under adverse conditions. It is laced with bayous and swamps The Red and Sabine rivers, with few bridges, form natural barriers to sweeping troop movements.

Garand Gun Will Be There.

The maneuvers will be the first broad test of the new streamlined army division. Total strength is 11,000 men, compared to 22,000 in the old unit But the smaller force packs as much potential death as the old because their guns are better.

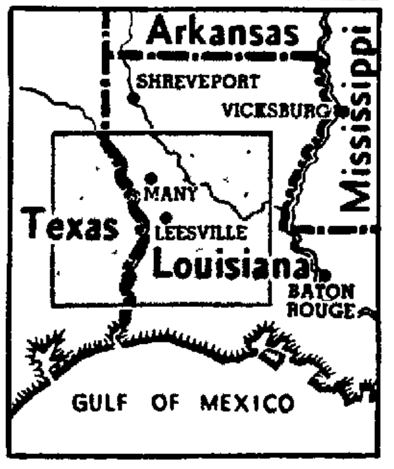
The new divisions are equipped with the army's pet killer, the Garand M-1 semi-automatic rifle. It pops off rat-a-tat-tat style—five times as fast as the old Springfield rifle.

The new division can "march" 75 miles a day, as against the 15-mile on-the-hoof range of the old Doughboys get a break They ride half the time. The old army mule that ran on hay and profanity has been given the air The 1,000 trucks of the new division haul half the outfit, then shuttle back for the other marchers.

The officers know the theories—they're about all they've had for years But the brass hats want to know if they can translate theory into actual know-how.

Legion Lends A Hand.

Basically, the actual maneuvers pit two armies, with full modern equipment, against each other (Some 9,000 American Legion members have also been enlisted to man 1,600 aircraft warning stations, to test the new civilian auxiliary technique—used by Britain.)



Regional setting of war games.
Regional setting of war games.

The Blue army, 45,000 troops under Maj. Gen. Walter Campbell Short is based north of Alexandria, La. The Red army—a highly mobile force, ideally fitted for blitzkrieg's lightning thrusts—is based 100 miles west at Jasper, Tex., an important highway junction. Maj. Gen. Walter Krueger is in command.

The 100-mile no-man's land is a tangle of wild country and mud. The primary roads run north and south, and the armies must move at right angles to the roads to maintain a broad front

To the north lies Shreveport, center of an oil empire, no mean military prize. Southeast is New Orleans, also a prime objective. The Red army is poised to thrust at either place. It is the Blue army's problem to interpose between the thrust and either objective

The Red army strategy may result in a pincers movement north and south from Jasper. But the wide frontal advances must proceed through the heavy going in the back country.

A Trial By Gumbo.

All the army's new guns and equipment must undergo "trial by gumbo," under the binoculars of staff observers alert for the failure of equipment in gooey terrain So must aviation, tanks, heavy and light artillery.

The 1940 war games will show the quality of the army we've already got—and will determine no little the kind of army we're going to get.

H. B. Swearingen, Richland county farm security administration superviser, joined F. S. A. officials from five other counties in this district yesterday on a soil conservation tour in Wayne county.

The group visited farms of F. S. A. clients and then discussed the inspection trip at the Wooster experiment station.

MAYOR SPEAKS

Locke Describes City Business at Rotary Meeting.

An inside story of Mansfield's public business was given at Tuesday's Rotary club meeting by Mayor William J. Locke, who spoke on the subject, "Your City."

During the course of his talk Mayor Locke told of amounts and sources of revenues available for use by various departments and also explained ways in which the business of the city is conducted, improvements carried through and plans made to meet future needs.

John W. Cook was program chairman for the meeting, and LeMoine Derr, director of music, presented two high school students, Donald McLaughlin, vocal soloist, and Betty Axtell, pianist, who gave several numbers.

Fred L. Tracy, special committee chairman, reported that 22 members of the Mansfield club attended the Rotary district conference in Lima last week.

CAT'S FAMILY SMELLS SKUNKY

Biological and Housing Puzzle Created by "Kittens."

GEORGETOWN, Tex. — Gypsy, Clifford Jacob's house cat, came up with a family and created an acute housing problem as well as a heated biological discussion.

The four infants, Jacobs and his neighbors testify, look and smell like skunks. Furthermore, they said, evidence indicated Gypsy was their natural mother.

Authorities on zoology in several Texas universities asserted however, Gypsy had just adopted a family while Jacobs had his attention focused elsewhere.

BELL REPLACED

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—(INS)—Instead of "There goes the last bell!" San Antonio school children now shout, "That's the last toot!" Horns resembling those on automobiles of the 'twenties are being installed in place of the traditional school bell to call the pupils to classes. The sound of the horns can be heard at a greater distance and are expected to last longer than the bells.

Bimelech's Just Too Fast, Henry McLemore Says

Louisville Unhappier Than Tobacco Auctioneer With Lisp.

By HENRY McLEMORE

LOUISVILLE—(UP)—On the eve of the eve of the Derby eve Louisville is unhappier than a tobacco auctioneer with a lisp.

Not because the mint juleps aren't in full blossom, or because the girls aren't as southern belle-ish as ever, but because of a horse that is just too fast.

Always before, the arrival at Churchill Downs of a Blue Grass baby who could whip them all has been a signal for general rejoicing.

Then along comes Bimelech.

For the first time the goatees of the colonels are at half mast because a Kentucky sire and Kentucky dam have given to the track a colt too swift—for the good of their own pocketbooks.

Col. Ed Bradley's three-year-old, with the coat of satin and the look of conquest in his eyes, was a 1 to 9 favorite in winning the Derby trial here yesterday. He paid off in the mutuels at the niggardly rate of $2 20 to win, $2 40 to place, and $2 20 to show.

Bimelech won the race so easily, and showed so much class in trouncing seven other Derby eligibles, that there is no telling what his price will be in the Derby on Saturday.

* * *

With 85,000 customers at the Downs, and with all 85,000 of them completely sold on Bimelech as not only the horse of the year, but, perhaps, the horse of all time, his price at post time may be as fantastic as 1 to 20 or even 1 to 30.

* * *

That's why Louisville is unhappy.

Everybody who saw Bimelech run yesterday knows he will win the Derby.

And that they must bet on him, if they bet at all.

At the same time, they know there isn't any use in betting on him. What doth it profit a man to bet $2 if he can only gain 10 cents? And the 10 cents only after waiting in a line for half an hour The 10 cents won't pay for the wear and tear on a fellow's shoes or his arches or his temper.

So, the thousands here for the Derby face the dismal prospect of betting against a sure thing. They know Bimmy is going to win, but, to get any thrill at all, or to enjoy any prospect of making a little money, they must wager on a horse or horses they know in their hearts can't give the Bradley bullet more than a gentle workout.

To tell the truth, no one is going to get rich betting on the place or show horses in the Derby There will be so much money crammed through the windows on Bimelech that the second and third nags won't pay off more than a dime or two The Derby trial showed that. Gallahadion, the second horse, was 26 to 1 on the tote board when the field went to the post, but he paid only $4 for coming in second And Sirocco, who came in third, was 19 to 1 on the board, but a ticket on him was worth only $2 20

CALLS PRACTICE

All Ontario ball players are requested to report to the Ontario field tomorrow for practice, Manager Marshall announced today.

By CHARLES MARTIN

THEIR tomahawks sharpened to a razor-like edge and themselves decked out in a fresh coat of war paint, the Mansfield Braves are set today to entertain an arch rival, the Lima Pandas, in the opening Ohio State league game under the arcs at 8:30 p. m. at the Fairground.

* * * * *

Manager Dewey Stover early today nominated Dick Otto, 19-year-old right-hander, to handle the mound duties as the Braves seek to register their initial triumph.

* * * * *

Determined to come up with a championship team, Stover will throw what he believes his strongest lineup into the tussle in an effort to get the jump on his rivals.

Tonight's setto is the only one scheduled in the six-team circuit. The other clubs will launch their seasons Thursday night.

Lima again possesses a strong combine, but Stover believes the batting power added to the Braves' attack will be a deciding factor. With eight of the nine veterans on the roster expected to see service, the Braves have what looms as a fine defensive team.

The only veteran out of tonight's lineup is Carl Foldenauer, first string backstop. A cold will keep him on the sidelines. Tim Mangan, a rookie from Dearborn, Mich., will handle the catching assignment, Stover stated today.

Foldenauer, who was with Tiffin last season, is regarded as a fine prospect, but Mansfield fans will not have a chance of seeing him in action until the Braves return here Monday night to face the Tiffin team. Monday night will be "Moose Lodge" night.

Mansfield club officials were set today to handle a capacity gathering. The league offers a trophy to the team with the largest opening night attendance, and officials are determined to bring the award to Mansfield.

* * * * *

Mansfield's batting order will line up like this: Zerman, lf; Beals, ss; Stover, rf; Dice, cf; Mangan, c; Seigbert, 1b; Padar, 2b; Ankenbrandt, 3b; Otto, p. Lima's is as follows: Kozak, ss Crum, 2b; Flynn, cf; Kiersey, 3b; Waite, lf; Holton, 1b; Lewis, rf, and Willett, Evans or Biscan, p.

* * * * *

Preceding tonight's contest, Cy Young, former major league hurler, and a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, will pitch the first ball. Mayor W. J. Locke will unwrap the first ball and toss it to Young, who is 73 years old. "Turk" Riley, a former major league catcher, is scheduled to be on hand for the opening ceremonies.

Redskins Hand 10-5 Licking to Athletics

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — The Cleveland Indians, relegated to a low spot in the American League standings in some winter books because of a supposed lack of power hitters, today led the major leagues in home runs

* * *

Hal Trosky and Ken Keltner hit two apiece yesterday as the Redskins walloped the Athletics, 10 to 5. The circuit blows raised the Cleveland total to 14 for 11 games.

* * *

Trosky leads with four, Jeff Heath has three, Heltner and Lou Boudreau, two; and Rollie Hemsley, Roy Weatherly and Ray Mack, one.

The victory, coupled with Boston's defeat, put the Indians back in undisputed first place. Johnny Allen was slated to try for his second victory of the year today with Nelson Potter the probable Philadelphia flinger.

Herman Beese, a rookie lefthander, opened for the Athletics in the first game of the series, the sixth time rival managers have pitched southpaws against the Tribe Cleveland has beatetn five of them, losing only to Thornton Lee of Chicago

Cleveland picked up two runs in the first on Boudreau's double and Trosky's first homer and drove Beese to cover in the third with a four-run attack, featuring singles by Weatherly and Hemsley, Heath's double and three walks

* * *

The Indians continued to pound Bill Beckman, collecting 13 hits that included nine extra-base blows.

* * *

Willis Hudlin went the route for the Redskins for his second victory of the season. He gave up 12 hits, but was in trouble only in the eighth when the A's plated three runs on four hits and Ben Chapman's error.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— While Tex Carleton was turning in his no-hit, no-run performance for the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday a Chagrin Falls high school pitcher was hurling a no-hitter to defeat Mentor high, 2 to 1. 1940 Madison High Gridders Lick Veterans

Score 7-6 Victory Over Last Year's Eleven.

By GEORGE SATTLER

Madison high school's 1940 football team scored an impressive 7 to 6 victory over the 1939 football combine under the floodlights at Madison field last night.

* * *

The 1940 team tallied their touchdown in the early minutes of the first quarter, when Harold Hammer's quick kick bounced off the jersey of an opposing player and rolled over the goal line, Bob Fletcher, center for the 1940 eleven, pounced on the ball for the six points.

Hammer, Madison's 117 pounds of dynamite back, then smashed his way through the line for the extra point.

Once in possession of the ball, the veterans began a hard-hitting attack that carried them deep into enemy territory. A pass from Matthes to DeNero put the ball in scoring position and DeNero knifed through tackle for the 1939's only touchdown DeNero hit the line for the extra point but failed to make the grade

The 1940 youngsters came back strong in the second half. A pass from Hammer to Heichel netted them 25 yards on the first play. Hammer then circled end for a first down, putting his teammates within scoring distance.

But on the next play Weimer dropped the ball and the veterans recovered Then Matthes, veteran half back, tried the line and fumbled. The 1940 team recovered, putting them once more in scoring position.

* * *

The fighting youngsters, however, lost the ball on downs after a succession of line plays, and never seriously threatened the goal line again.

* * *

Outstanding defensive player of the ball game was big Walt Weimer, whose hard tackling and expert blocking should give Madison's opponents a heap of trouble when the 1940 season opens in September

Harold Hammer and little, 110 pound Jack Amos will also bear watching Hammer has all the ear marks of being one of the greatest open field runners in county football this year

Brooklyn's Tex Carleton Hurls No-Hit Contest

Discarded By Minors a Few Months Ago, He Looks From Heights of Fame Today.

By JOHN FRYE

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Tex Carleton, discarded by the minors only months ago as an apparent "washout," looked at the world today from the heights of no-hit baseball fame.

In as grand and history-making a game as fans ever will chance to see, the tall and curly-haired 33-year-old refugee from the American association pitched the undefeated Brooklyn Dodgers to a 3 to 0 triumph over Cincinnati yesterday before 10,544 fans who were with him almost to a man.

If any there were who cried "They can't do that to our Reds," they didn't have much chance to be heard.

They had cheered Milkman Jim Turner, late of the Boston Bees, who in eight innings allowed Brooklyn but four hits. But soon after Pete Coscarart of the Dodgers lofted one over the left-field wall in the fifth for a three-run homer, fans shifted their attention to Carleton They applauded the Reds—but rooted for the Texan.

* * *

Aside from tying a modern major league record in giving his team its ninth straight game at the start of the season, there was poetic justice in Carleton's performance.

* * *

Walking two and striking out four he gave the Reds a dose of the medicine they administered to the Brooks June 15, 1938, when Johnny Vander Meer pitched the second of his twin no-hit, no-run games That, incidentally, was the last no-hitter hurler by a National leaguer.

Carleton, former St Louis Card, then of the Chicago Cubs but sold down river to Milwaukee and unconditionally released last year, conceded "it makes me feel great," but said he "didn't realize until the eighth that I might have a no-hitter"

"From then on," he grinned, "I counted every pitch

'Starting from the dugout to pitch the ninth, I asked (Coach) Charley Dressen if he thought I could make it

"'Sure,' he told me. 'You're a cinch. Go in there and get it over with'"

Carleton threw a total of 92 tosses. Four men faced him in each of three innings as a result of his two walks and Dodger errors, and the rest of the time the Reds went out one-two-three.

Today's game finds Hugh Casey seeking victory No 10 for Larry MacPhail He'll oppose Bucky Walters, who already has a three-hit performance to his credit this year.

Every day was a circus—for a while

The roar of the crowd... the thundering hoofs foretold the fall of mighty Rome—all because an empire went pleasure-mad and forgot what made it great. Rome went soft.

All play and no work has always spelled collapse—for a person as well as a nation. Isn't a balanced life with a fair share of work and a fair share of leisure more sensible and satisfying? Then tasks become attractive—and there's still ample time for your hobbies, family and friends. They help you readjust your perspective... revitalize your good humor... rest your mind and body. Good work puts you in a mood for recreation, and healthful re-creation puts you back in the mood for work. Your moderation puts you in balance and in harmony with progress.

A Beverage of Moderation

WE MAKE THIS AIR TEST: Every drop of Budweiser comes to you with all its original goodness protected in every way. Air, for example, has been taken out of each bottle through a process which we developed at great expense, because our exhaustive tests proved that air inside a sealed bottle is an enemy of fine beer.

YOU MAKE THIS TEST: Drink Budweiser for five days. On the sixth day try to drink a sweet beer. You will want Budweiser's flavor thereafter.

Many a penny is wasted by people who put a three-cent stamp on a letter addressed for local delivery.

What this country needs is more people who are satisfied to smoke a five-cent cigar.

The Philippines have contended that they wanted independence and needed no American protection — and some children are that way, until they get into trouble.

Industry's High Percentage

AS MANSFIELD'S Community Chest campaign moves with amazing speed toward its goal of $57,500, a phase of yesterday's reports which must have impressed every observant reader is the high percentage of the total that is represented by Mansfield industries—considerably above half of the entire amount required for maintenance of nine essential welfare, charitable and character-building community activities.

While Mansfield has quite definitely taken place as an industrial city, it may be doubted if all citizens fully appreciate the real importance of this city's many and widely diversified industries in promoting civic advancement and sharing largely in all constructive projects.

Whether as employes or employers, the enthusiastic interest in the Community Chest campaign which has been shown year after year by persons associated with Mansfield industries has provided inspiration to hundreds of other workers and supporters of these annual fund-raising campaigns.

This tribute to industrial contributors can be given without in any way minimizing the fine work being done by the other divisions in the campaign, whose totals, while smaller, are, none-the-less essential to the success of the campaign and reflect the spirit of Mansfield in working shoulder to shoulder in accomplishing things that are worthwhile.

Nor should the contributions of those engaged in industry, and the fact that subscriptions are now nearing the mark set, deter others from giving, in accordance with their ability. The $57,500 total decided upon for this year's campaign represents a minimum of requirements of the various agencies which participate in distribution of funds from the Community Chest and contributions considerably above that amount can be made to perform excellent service.

Woe To The Vanquished

IT IS a fine picture of the future that Giovanni Ansaldo painted for the Italian people on the 2,692nd anniversary of the founding of Rome. Addressing the nation's armed forces, he said:

"The losers in war will be subjected to expropriation. (That is, their property will be confiscated.) They will be exploited in every possible manner. They will be reduced to the state of Chinese coolies compelled to toil for others.

"There is not a shred of internationalism which can save tomorrow's vanquished from this fate. The victors will attempt to take possession of the whole world, and there is no fine promise which can make them do otherwise.

"The supreme interests of Italian workers," he added, "rests with Italy's might. Only if Italy is strong, very strong, can they be in one way or another among the conquerors."

Nazi Germany is already practising this barbarous policy, but Americans have hardly expected Italians to adopt it. Even for remote and sheltered America, the implication is plain. We must be strong and united.

Payment for Professional Service

A READER suggests that material for an editorial might be found in the inclination of some people to delay payment for professional services — specific reference being made to doctors, dentists and lawyers.

It may be doubted if anything new or different can be said on that subject, as the inclination to defer payment for professional services seems to apply equally to those who can afford to pay promptly as well as to persons in the lower income group who have trouble "making ends meet."

Doctors, in particular, are in the somewhat difficult position of being the first to be called in time of illness or accident, and—ordinarily—the last to be paid. Seldom does an old doctor die without having thousands of dollars of uncollectible accounts on his books.

Dentists are in better position than doctors to require cash payment in the absence of established credit, and lawyers can frequently choose their clientele on the basis of ability and willingness to pay.

The fact remains, however, that many people neglect to pay for professional services promptly, possibly on the theory that "he doesn't need the money," and that this frequently works a hardship on professional men who are thus hampered in meeting their own obligations.

Established credit, based on a record of prompt payment of all just accounts, is a phase of good citizenship which should not be neglected. When an account for professional services cannot all be paid at one time, partial payments thereon as frequently as possible are an evidence of good faith and serve to maintain a satisfactory credit rating.

Quick Paint Job

AT A RECENT painting performance in Memphis, Tenn., a two-story house was given a nice, new coat of paint in eight and a half minutes—which broke all known records.

It should be explained that 36 painters were working on the job, and they swarmed over the place so thickly that they probably got as much paint on each other as on the house. Anyway it was a fine exhibition, putting to shame the previous record of 22 minutes held by Memphis painters and also the championship record of 18 minutes held by Cincinnati. No, it wasn't a WPA job.

The Art of Selling

SAYS a successful salesman: "A person need not be a trained psychologist to sell successfully or to train and guide other salesmen so that they can answer all objections—meet all excuses for not buying—and skillfully lead the prospect into a demonstration that will clinch the claims made and lead to buying the product."

There is much virtue in the simple little term, "Yes—but," he says, if you're not too belligerent about it. You must use it as a sort of shock-absorber and then gently steer the customer's interest in the direction you want it to go.

The gold reported in Georgia is interesting but less important than the peaches and sweet potatoes.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The attitude of the army, navy and marine folk toward death is not that of the average layman. These men who walk and sail and fly with death have come to regard this one of the Four Horsemen pretty matter-of-factly and their only concern is that he not catch them wanting in courage or bearing the stigma of dishonor. Their women feel the same way about it.

Military funerals are solemn affairs, certainly the most impressive and beautiful of all military rituals, but there is little of sadness or grief about them. When taps are blown, and life's colors struck, the band strikes up a quick march and its "on with the show."

* * *

The Home of Heroes.

Thus, beautiful Arlington cemetery, on the gentle hills and ravines above the Potomac, has a different atmosphere than any graveyard in the land. It is not a place of sadness and weeping, but rather a field of honor . . . a place where the living may come, not to grieve, but to pay homage to those who have given their lives to a nation and a cause. And military folk look on Arlington as a field of honor, where it is their privilege to lie down with the heroes who have marched before.

It is this feeling of special privilege, of almost private ownership, which causes the Arlington staff, headed by a colonel, occasional trouble.

For years, it has become the traditional right of the men who are to rest in Arlington to select the site of their interment.

* * *

The General Chooses.

Almost any warm, sunny day, you can see on the paths of Arlington old men or old couples strolling about, eyeing this view or that with the object of selecting their plot. Once in a while, conflicting selections are made. To find a solution to these often calls for all the diplomacy that the staff can summon.

There was one old general, long retired, who spent months selecting his site. Almost every day when the weather was good, he and his wife would go to Arlington and tread the paths and search for their cemetery plot.

At last they found it, and the colonel, after considerable maneuvering, managed to assign it to them. The old couple were delighted and chief cause of their delight was a beautiful old elm that spread over a corner of the plot.

* * *

They Liked That Elm.

Throughout the spring and summer and fall, they would go to the cemetery and sit in the shade of their tree and enjoy their view of the Potomac and distant Washington.

They came to be well known to the Arlington staff. For the general and his wife, the staff came to have a genuine affection.

Imagine the colonel's horror, when he discovered during a casual early spring inspection, that the general's tree had disappeared. It had developed blight and the foresters had removed it.

The colonel went into action, routed out a detail of huskies and searched the Virginia hills until he found a big elm that matched the general's. Transplanting it was a whale of a job, the colonel recalls, but he got it done. The ground beneath was sodded before the colonel and his lady made their next visit.

The colonel and I are happy to report that the general's elm is now one of the finest in Arlington.

Opposition to Logan-Walter Bill

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

BECAUSE the administration turned thumbs down on it, the so-called Logan-Walter bill has had hard sledding in congress for more than a year. The bill now goes to the senate, the house having recently passed it.

It's a measure which hasn't been much advertised until lately, although it's broken somewhat into the news recently, due to its passage by the house of representatives. It's a highly important piece of proposed legislation, however, which deserves to be well understood.

Its purpose is to give citizens the right to appeal to the courts from decisions of the numerous independent government agencies, of which more than 100 are operating today in Washington and, through local subordinates, throughout the whole country.

Congress has a habit of creating one of these agencies, such as the Federal Trade commission, the Securities and Exchange commission, the Interstate Commerce commission, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, et cetera, every now and then to regulate national economics down to details that congress itself hasn't time to bother with, by the passage of specific laws.

There are so many of them now that pretty much everything is regulated by one or another of them—more or less. They regulate not only big business, but just ordinary folk, too.

Virtually Absolute.

Their powers vary, but a good many of them are virtually absolute. They make rules, and if their rules are broken they assess penalties. Offenders may have their property confiscated. Individual culprits may even be slammed into jail. And these corporations, firms or persons get no trials before any impartial court. The agency that's after them may grant them a hearing, but it's its own prosecutor, jury and judge.

The American Bar association and numerous others took the view that companies, or just American citizens, should be entitled to appeal from their various particular agencies' ukases to a regular court of law.

Accordingly, the late Senator Marvel M. Logan of Kentucky and Representative Francis E. Walter of Pennsylvania (both Democrats) introduced in congress a bill to that effect. It was a very complicated bill, but that was the nub of it.

President Roosevelt expressed himself in the bill's favor. It passed the senate unanimously. Then the president changed his mind. The administration came out against it. Thereupon the senate called for a chance to vote again. In the meantime, the bill had gone to the representatives, who held it up persistently—apparently rather friendly to it, yet hesitant to overrule White House wishes.

This meant that the senate still was on the fence. Passage by the representatives was deemed likely. But the senate remained uncertain, despite its previous unanimity.

Governmental Jealousy.

It's understandable why, upon mature consideration, the administration decided it didn't like the Logan-Walter bill.

It probably didn't care so much about the older agencies, like the Interstate Commerce commission, which have been functioning so long that they're accepted as a matter of course. But it has a lot of New Deal establishments in operation now, and was opposed to having their authority semi-hamstrung by plenty of delaying litigation.

On the opposite hand, the bill's supporters have contended that government by appointed (not elected) agencies is a long step toward totalitarianism—such as Germany's. The president these reasoners argue, names the various agencies' personnels, making him virtually a dictator, they say. That is, a proxy dictator, through his appointees.

It can be counter-argued, of course, that congress shouldn't have created the agencies in the first place. Undoubtedly it was shirking its legislative duty in doing so. Certainly it tried to deputize a deal of its lawmaking—lazy work.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—They are dusting off the bustles of another of New York's grand dames of the nineties and building a movie around her career. This time it is Lillian Russell, and the movies have skipped a couple of her divorces in order to make the film more salable throughout the country.

Our generation doesn't know very much about Lil and her playmates of 40 years ago, unless we are to believe what the earlier historians would have us believe—mainly, that her era was one of incredibly bad taste and exceptionally lusty appetites. Lillian herself paraded Broadway with a dog in a diamond-studded collar. Her curves were couched in a diamond-studded corset, and her face began to appear on cigar labels and box wrappings.

Those were the days when the Minnie Madden Fiskes and the Julia Marlowes, together with Maude Adams, the inevitable Diamond Jim Brady (I'm getting tired writing about him) and Weber & Fields dominated the Broadway scene. Their lavish dinners were sparked by black pearls served with the oysters, and cigars were wrapped in hundred dollar bills. Through this company strode the architect Stanford White, soon to be shot, Abe Hummel, and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish. A belle of her times indeed Lillian was, but I can tell you this: the girl who approximates her on the screen will not come within 50 pounds of the true Lillian. This modern generation would snicker at romance wrapped up in Lillian's generous poundage. . . . And that, you will admit, would never do.

LIKE any other piker with a new hat, we dodged a shower yesterday by jumping into a cab. As our hack paused at an intersection another driver cruised up and yelled, "Joe, Six Sixty!"

Joe nodded then said to us out of the side of his mouth, "That's nuttin. I got $8.50 on my meter. He'll go home and blab to his wife, but not me."

"Don't you tell the little woman everything?"

"They's two things I don't do," snapped Joe. "I don't tell my wife my business and I don't allow her to talk to other cab drivers' wives. If I did she'd come home whining that somebody's husband made $10 yesterday and why didn't I make $10 yesterday. I'll give her $4 tonight and that's all. If I have a bad day tomorrow I'll have enough left over to still give her $4. What she don't know don't hurt her."

NEW YORK, in the throes of a building program, is like a man who takes off his pants with one hand while putting on his shirt with the other. We tear down and build up without even waiting for the mortar to dry. There hasn't been a single hour in the last 50 years that the town hasn't reverberated to pneumatic drills and falling bricks. At this writing 6th avenue is being torn up and repaved for the third time in as many years. Even our own AP building, less than two years old, had a scaffolding on it recently while a giant new plaque was being set into place.

We are the greatest and the most prolific builders of wrecking scaffolds on earth. Sometimes I wonder if the captains of our scuttling crews are the descendants of hangmen.

Guns in Hands of Boys.

A 12-year-old Toledo boy is dead because of a bullet fired at a bird by another 15-year-old youth. This follows another shooting of recent months in which a lad received a serious head wound at the hands of a schoolmate.

Every boy asks his parents to give him a rifle. For one reason why a youngster should have any sort of firearm there are scores of reasons why he should not. Only a person of proved caution and good judgment should ever be trusted with a gun. There should never be shooting in or near an urban area. Youth should be trained to preserve life instead of destroy it. Bird lovers patiently try to point out that even the lowly English sparrow is too valuable a creature to be the object of unthinking slaughter.

When a lad lies dead as the result of one of these too frequent target rifle mishaps, it is a proper time for all parents to inquire what good purpose is served by gunning as a recreation for a youngster.—Toledo Blade.

May Day Change

—By JEAN NEWTON

May Day—not the nature festival featuring the Maypole—but the echo of the holiday spirit of our Labor Day, which, in fact, it is abroad, is growing less and less significant in the United States, the observance being usually quiet and unnoticed by the mass of our citizens.

It was, however, for a long time, another story in Europe.

There, the celebration of May Day as the counterpart of our Labor Day was started half a century ago with a demonstration in favor of the eight-hour day.

This was the forerunner of annual, riotous disturbances by the radical elements of labor, in the course of which, May 1 was marked by the throwing of bombs, the burning of buildings and skirmishes between the police or soldiers and the demonstrators.

Today, May Day comes and goes without unseemly episodes.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig's remark that "war with Japan is inevitable" wasn't the only bombshell in his sensational speech before the senate naval affairs committee. There was another that—at the last minute—he didn't fire.

Halfway in his prepared manuscript, immediately following the paragraph warning that the consequences of modern warfare are so far-reaching that the "overthrow of our form of government" is not improbable, was this startling statement:

"Our financial structure, none too sound at present on account of the huge public debt, cannot stand such a strain."

Taussig skipped this hot dig at the New Deal when he read his prepared paper, but newsmen didn't know it because no copies of the speech were distributed. A member of the committee, who later happened to glance through the manuscript, discovered the interesting omission scratched out in pencil by Taussig.

Whether the rear admiral backed away on the advice of navy superiors, or because of his own caution, is his secret. Whatever the reason, he passed up the brickbat when he got before the committee.

* * *

Tough Mug.

THE ceremony commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Pan-American Union was a swank gathering made up entirely of topflight officials and diplomats. No one could get in without an engraved invitation. Nevertheless the secret service was on hand in numbers, and while the president spoke, they maintained a sharp-eyed watch on the audience.

Especially was this true of a rookie agent who was "covering" Roosevelt for the first time. The zealous youngster spotted a baldish, square-jawed, athletic gentleman in the front row, and after eying him suspiciously for a while inquired of an older agent, "Say, who is that tough-looking mug over there?"

"He isn't a mug," grinned his colleague. "He's Justice Stanley Reed of the Supreme Court."

* * *

Bouquets and Brickbats.

IN Washington, Representative Graham A. Barden is getting plaudits from anti-administration cronies for putting through his bill axing the Wage-Hour law, but down in his North Carolina district he is fighting for his political life.

His opponent is challenging him squarely on the labor issue—and doing it to music.

The enterprising rival is Charles L. Abernethy, jr., small-town lawyer who has twice given Barden hot election battles, and whose father held Barden's seat for twelve years. Abernethy's campaign methods are a combination of those made famous by Texas' crooning Governor ("Pass-the-biscuits-pappy") O'Daniel and a movie "bank night."

Abernethy doesn't sing himself, but he has a quartet of crooners who do. They furnish the music for a "country store" stunt that is packing them into his meetings in droves.

It consists of a free raffle of sacks of flour which Abernethy carts around from town to town. Everyone who attends his meetings is given a ticket with a number. After a program of songs and a speech by Abernethy, a large baking powder can is placed on the platform and numbers picked from it by a blind-folded youngster. To each winner Abernethy presents a big sack of flour, accompanied by this hot jab at Barden:

"He is taking bread out of the mouths of working people by his bill which would put them back on a ten-cents an hour wage basis. I'm putting the bread back in the mouths of these poor folks."

* * *

Crooning Governors.

IT looks as if Texas is sure to have another crooning governor in the executive mansion, no matter what happens. There are a lot of candidates contending for the seat of W. Lee O'Daniel, and one of them is the colorful, clowning Jerry Sadler, Texas railroad commissioner.

At the last election, O'Daniel was brash enough to urge Texas to vote against Sadler, so now Jerry has hired himself a swing band and is out to outcroon O'Daniel for the governorship.

Jerry Sadler's brother runs the Harvey Sadler tent shows, so that Jerry comes by his political grandstanding honestly. His hill-billy swingsters now rival O'Daniel's family radio act, especially since Texas radio stations are now trying to turn thumbs down on O'Daniel.

However, while most of the radio stations plus the vast majority of the newspapers in the Lone Star state are dead against Texas' crooning governor, it looks as if he is sure to be re-elected.

Reason is that he still has the old folks with him, and also the big oil companies. The oldsters, to whom he once promised liberal pensions, are convinced that O'Daniel was blocked by a hostile legislature, while the oil companies have found O'Daniel one of the most cooperative governors in years. In fact, he has come to be known as the rich man's friend elected by the poor people.

Lawyers' Roost.

BEFORE handsome, white-maned Paul McNutt embarked on his campaign tour he had a very trying encounter with the senate appropriations committee, which asked him to explain how come there are 120 lawyers on his federal security administration staff.

Senator Kenneth McKellar, veteran Tennessean, read off a list of seven, eight and nine thousand dollar salaries received by these attorneys, and then inquired, "What or earth do they all do?"

"Interpret the law," replied McNutt.

"Do they all work at this all the time?"

"Oh, yes."

"When do you think they'll begin winding up this interpreting sufficiently so you can start letting them out?"

"We don't intend to let any of them out. We want to add three more."

"Three more?" cried McKellar. "What for?"

"To interpret the law."

"How long will it take before the law is interpreted?"

McNutt gave up. "I'll let the chief counsel explain that," he said, turning to Chief Counsel Harper Fowler, who revealed that in addition to its corps of 120 attorneys in Washington, the FSA also has staffs of lawyers in most of its state branch offices.

Two Gasoline Drums

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

A FARMER had two 50 gallon gasoline drums on a bench beneath the smokehouse extension roof. The little frame building was half way between the barn and the house, the fuel well-stored upon strong low oaken trestles. One day I noticed him draw a canful from the nearer drum and poured it into the tank of his automobile. Next time I passed he was taking gas from the other drum. The tractor stood near by. Curiosity prompted me to stop a moment.

"Why do you keep two drums of gas on hand?" I asked.

He smiled. "Well, I use my tractor and I drive my car. They both take gasoline. I get the tractor drum filled twice as often as the other, since spring work started. I keep 'em separate, so I won't cheat the state or the nation. One costs me $150 more'n the other.

"It don't seem to me anybody in good standing with himself or his Maker could sign a paper that said what it didn't mean. A man has to sign a paper to get his tax rebate. I ain't aimin' to beat nobody—that's why I have two drums."

"But suppose your tractor runs dry when you're busy and can't get more that day?" I asked.

"That happened twice in four years and then I marked down what I used and had the gas man put it back while I was watching. I've often thought it's no worse to cheat my own mother or father than to cheat the government I live under and that protects me. The government won't miss it but I'd lose my own respect for myself and when that's gone a man might do just anything.

"I still believe there's an eye that sees when no one is around to check up and an unseen hand stretched out to bless the one who is fair and right. My father told me more'n once, 'an honest man's the noblest work of God' and I've wished he'd a told more folks and made 'em believe it. I believe such thoughts would stop wars and build parks and homes and churches. If everyone was fair there'd be nothing to fight about."

RATS ADVANCE JITTER STUDY

Science Finds Rodents Suffer From Emotional Troubles Much Like Humans.

CLEVELAND, O. —(UP)— Medical authorities long have known rats as the fittest subjects for experimentation because of their susceptibility to human diseases, but investigations at Western Reserve University indicate another—and perhaps stranger—affinity between men and rats.

There is growing evidence that rats have serious emotional troubles. Like problem children or adults they sometimes shun their fellows, manifest the jitters and refuse to eat.

And so the Western Reserve psychology department under Dr. Calvin S. Hall is probing into the private emotional life of rats, keeping close tabs on the moods and frets of the little animals in search for clues to the mounting toll of human beings falling victim to serious emotional diseases.

Two Strains Developed.

Dr Hall is not yet ready to make any official announcements concerning his "emotional" rats, but his investigations are advancing. He now has a considerable colony of the rodents, including two strains which have been inbred until their "personality" traits are very distinct. There is one strain of unemotional or phlegmatic rodents and another jittery of emotional strain.

Dr. Eleanor Yeakel of the affiliated Florence Stone Mather College for Women, collaborates with Dr. Hall by searching for physical reasons for rodent temperaments. She has found for example, that emotional rats have oversize glands.

Problem Rat Blind.

Recently a problem believed to be neurotic was shipped from Harvard University to Reserve for observation and experiment. Momie, as the "problem" was dubbed, was a sore trial at first. She sulked, shunned her fellows, refused to exercise and ate in intervals Suddenly she responded to special treatment, returning to normality in a few days. Momie was blind and nobody had known it When Dr Hall took steps to alleviate some of the disadvantages caused by Momie's sightless eyes, her behavior problems disappeared.

STAGE FLOODED BY LEAKY TUB

"The Women" Quit Splashing But Audience Starts.

MURFREESBORO, Tenn.—The main character in a bath tub scene from "The Women" suddenly quit splashing in the borrowed bath tub—and for good reason.

The tub had sprung a leak, flooded the stage and part of the State Teachers college audience.

Down went the curtain. A crew of mop-wielders set to work, and shortly the play was resumed

MEMORY JOLTED WITH WARRANTS

25,000 Traffic Violations On Pittsburgh Court Books.

PITTSBURGH—The police have a lot of warrants to serve—25,000 to be exact.

It seems that a good many motorists just "forgot" about traffic tags in the last several years.

Radio patrolmen and motorcycle cops now are handing out warrants, and it's either pay up or go to jail.

'Vendol' Helped Me From the First Says Local Inspector

Responsible resident gives favorite medicine full credit for relieving many troubles due to constipation. Says all should try it.

MR. GAIL KERN

"Anyone who knows me will recall the misery I had to go through with during the past few years so, it was an astonishing thing to find that Vendol truly helped me from the first day I began taking it," says Mr. Gail Kern, of Pawnee Avenue, Mansfield, Inspector at the Tappan Stove Company.

"My bowels never seemed to work freely, naturally or thoroughly unless I took strong medicines then, this left me worse than before and seemed this sapped my strength and energy.

"Then lately seemed most everything went wrong. My meals distressed me with indigestion, gas was so bad that my breath came short and the "heartburn" was awful. I'd awaken every morning with a headache, feeling dizzy, tongue coated and my muscles feeling tired and achy and the pains down through my legs tormented me almost daily

"About four weeks ago I began to take Vendol and the little Vendol laxative tablets. The first few doses started my bowels moving nicely, so I've kept taking it regularly and it has acted like a charm and I have a different story to tell.

"I enjoy every mouthful of food now with none of the former suffering, no gas, bloating, sourness, awaken with a clear head and no signs of the aches and pains Yes, that is what relief from constipation did for me and Vendol made me feel like a new person so I believe it can do the same for others that is why I'm glad to recommend Vendol to the public"

Vendol is sold by most all leading druggists everywhere and is highly recommended here by Central Drug Store, corner Main and 4th streets. Come in today and have the Vendol Man explain all about this marvelous compound.

"Rochester" Kidnaping Leads To Riot of Boston Students

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — (INS) — Eight Harvard students were arrested today during a riot that followed the kidnaping of "Rochester," negro radio and film comedian who appears with Jack Benny, by Massachusetts Institute of Technology pranksters from a Harvard smoker.

More than 2,000 youths from both institutions battled and then set upon 50 Cambridge policemen summoned by a riot call

Police hats were snatched, occasional blows were struck and water was dropped from dormitory windows as study-weary boys attempted a drive on Radcliffe college, a girls' institution.

Police drove a wedge into the milling crowd near Harvard Square, dispersed the students and arrested the eight. They were charged with disturbing the peace

The negro valet-comedian, whose real name is Eddie Anderson, was met at Providence, R. I., airport by Tech students who said they were a Harvard reception committee.

Instead of taking him to the Harvard smoker they took him to the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity house at Tech. There he entertained and was entertained until nearly morning, finally being taken by an automobile caravan to the Harvard smoker at Memorial hall.

"Rochester," who stood apart from the rioting students, forgave the Tech pranksters, saying.

"They can kidnap me any time I had a lot of fun"

PAY DIRT HIT IN UNAMERICAN PROBE BY DIES

Committee Chief Comes Into Position of Prominence For Investigation.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Rep Martin Dies (D-Tex) has hit a yard-wide streak of pay dirt in his House committee's diggings into unAmerican activities.

Climbing through a heap of ridicule and derision, the lanky, sandy-haired representative has come to a position of prominence in the House.

It listens to him attentatively and showers him with applause. Members rise voluntarily to say they will be glad to forget about economy and vote money for his inquiry when and if he needs more. Experienced head-line snatchers eye him with envy. He has become a personage.

Yet, it has been less than two years since the Dies committee was an object of ridicule from many quarters. Its tactics were criticized Even its objectives were questioned

The transformation is not so much one of Martin Dies or of the Dies committee. It is running along in about the same way it always has Dies, always a good, persuasive speaker, is not much better than he used to be And he is doing about the same kind of a job that several men tried to do before him.

Back in 1930, when Hamilton Fish of New York was Red hunting, the nation was thinking about a depression. Voters were preoccupied with their own woes. Other communistic investigations failed to stir a ripple of enthusiasm.

Few got excited about the Dies inquiry in 1938. But the war clouds began to change public thinking. As small European countries began to get knocked off, one by one, interest rose in the Dies committee's work. Men wondered it it could happen here.

Letters piled in upon members of congress. And that was what waked up the house to the Dies committee.

Detroit Strohs Bid for Win

Bowling Congress Goes Into Final Week Today.

DETROIT—(AP)—The American Bowling Congress tournament entered its final week today with only one team conceded a chance to upset the leading Chicago Monarchs in the five-man feature event.

That team, the Detroit Strohs, makes its bid tonight bringing a 96-game winter season average of 999.70.

Leaders remained undisturbed in all four divisions yesterday. Of 120 teams competing on the evening card, the Red Flares of Fostoria, O., posted the high total, 2,810 enough to gain a slice of the $241,000 prize melon but far below the Monarchs' score of 3,047.
